Crusade Goes On

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 18.—Wendell L. Willkie, tousle-headed Republican nominee for President, made a spectacular arrival—from the skies—in California this afternoon, and set out on a gruelling itinerary which he hoped would give him that State's 22 electoral votes in November.

His very first act was to woo the support of United States Senator Hiram Johnson.

"I would be untrue to my own beliefs," Willkie said, "if I did not pay my tribute to that great, fighting, fearless champion of liberalism, Hiram Johnson."

He said that Johnson had been his idol as a boy in Indiana, and that for 25 years he had followed his "matchless career" as California Governor and United States Senator.

Tonight, here in San Diego, Willkie charged that President Roosevelt has more and more concentrated in himself power that should have been left to advisory bodies and commissions, and has ignored the value of business enterprise.

"The truth is, he has lost faith in us," Willkie said. "Whenever a problem arises, he does not think we can solve it. He steps in and

New York Times Indorses Willkie

New York, Sept. 18 (INS).—The New York Times, normally an "independent Democratic" newspaper in its political policy, tonight came out for Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee.

In a leader editorial, the New York Times announced its support of the G. O. P. candidate for the Presidency. The Times supported Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Presidential election in 1932 and for re-election in 1936, although during recent years it has criticized the New Deal for its fiscal policies. Detailed Story, Page 16.

Mrs. Bankhead To Be Offered Husband's Place

Jasper, Ala., Sept. 18 (AP).—Judge J. M. Moore, of Fayette, said here tonight Mrs. Florence Bankhead would be recommended to the State Democratic executive committee as nominee to succeed the late Speaker Bankhead.

Moore, chairman of the Seventh Congressional District committee, said the members would suggest Mrs. Bankhead at a meeting Saturday as nominee for the two-year term beginning in January, to which her husband had been nominated.

Mother's Inspection . . .

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt plans an inspection tour for next month. But it will be neither party fences, defense areas nor hydro-electric projects that will come under her eyes.

It came up at Mrs. Roosevelt's first press conference since June. She said she did not expect to be in Washington very much until late autumn. She said she will spend most of the next month traveling across the country visiting her four sons and her daughter.

A reporter asked:

"Are you going to inspect them?"

Above the rippling laughter that followed, the First Lady laughingly replied that she was.

G. O. P. Polls Largest Vote In Wisconsin

New Deal Faction Of Labor Party Leads in New York

By the Associated Press

Republicans polled more votes than the combined total of Progressive and Democratic candidates in Tuesday's gubernatorial primary in Wisconsin, while a New Deal faction of the American Labor Party led so-called "left-wing" candidates in 53 of 94 Legislative and Congressional contests in New York, with 37 other contests still unsettled.

G. O. P. Vote Heavy

Incomplete Wisconsin returns showed that the two Republican candidates for Governor already had polled a total well in excess of the party's complete official count in the 1938 primary and far ahead of the primary vote in 1936, the last Presidential election year. The Republican nominee—Gov. Julius P. Heil—probably will be opposed in November by Orland S. Loomis, Progressive, and Francis E. McGovern, Democrat. The latter two had comfortable leads with most of the precincts counted.

In the New York Labor Party voting, returns gave candidates favorable to President Roosevelt 53 Congressional and Legislative offices to 40 for those opposing a third term for the President. One nomination went to an Independent.

G. O. P. Incumbents Win

The left wing, however, insisted that it expected to control the State A. L. P. convention and Morris Watson, leftist chairman of a committee seeking to "rebuild" the party, maintained that "hysterical claims of the old guard notwithstanding," the returns indicated up-State gain for the faction.

Luigi Antonini, rightist State chairman, viewed the balloting as an assurance of A. L. P. nomination of United States Senator James M. Mead, Buffalo Democrat, who is expected to be renominated at the Democratic State convention, September 30.

"The outcome of yesterday's primaries," Antonini added, "deter-

Ribbentrop, Duce Confer Today; Help by Spain Believed Topic

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 18.—All informed circles in Germany stressed tonight that Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop's forthcoming conversations in Rome will result in Axis "action—not words," and it was hinted that Spain and Egypt are the primary subjects for consideration.

Ribbentrop left today to consult Mussolini and other leaders of Fascist Italy, and it was learned tonight that on his return he again will see Ramon Serrano Suner, Berlin's highly-placed Spanish visitor. This fact was taken in political circles as lending added significance to Spain's place in what Germans call the coming scheme of things.

Cautiously, some iuspired commentators argued in talking with foreign correspondents that the Anglo-American trade of destroyers for defense bases will also be considered during the Rome talks. The German press, which at an obvious hint from above has consistently minimized the significance of this matter, made no direct reference to the United States, however.

Predict Concrete Results.

Even today, authorized sources would not go beyond the statement that it was on the Rome "agenda," but their manner indicated the transaction is causing the Axis powers concern.

Aside from this, however, Egypt and Spain were expected to be the primary subjects for discussion among Ribbentrop, whom some Germans now regard as a sort of second Bismarck, and Benito Mussolini and Count Ciano, his son-in-law and foreign minister.

"This isn't a peace-time visit," one source said. "In times like this, when top Axis statesmen meet, concrete results are bound to ensue. Many events have taken place since Count Ciano came to Vienna three weeks ago."

As an afterthought he added: "Events move very rapidly nowadays—everybody is in a hurry for a decision."

Spain Sets Her Price

Egypt now has been invaded by Italian armies in what the German press has been calling a battle for the liberation of the Egyptians from the British. It seems logical that German troops might be used to help Italy in this push.

That German troops are ready to go to colonial areas is generally known. Vaccinations of volunteers for possible colonial service has been an order of the day. The presence of German mechanized volunteers in Ethiopia has also been disclosed in the German press.

Spain this week sent Serrano Suner, key minister and brother-in-law of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, to Berlin, and now, informed sources say, the problem is where to fit Spain into the Axis scheme of things. That Spain will want something in return for her cooperation is accepted, and most frequently mentioned is the great

Senate Votes Security Rights For Conscripts

Tax Bill Amendment Would Also Protect Guardsmen Called

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate acted yesterday to relieve the financial burdens of men drafted for the Army, granting broad powers to the President to protect the social security rights and provide Government insurance and dependents' allowances for those called.

Without debate, an amendment providing such authority was written into the excess profits tax bill on the floor. Designed primarily to prevent loss of old-age and unemployment benefits to the men conscripted or called out with the National Guard, its language was purposely made vague, to permit Senate and House conferees on the bill to work out more definite provisions later.

Government insurance already exists for men entering the Army, which, however, might be liberalized under the amendment. The provision for dependent's allowances would affect few men at present, as the deferment of men with dependents is contemplated in time of peace.

Meanwhile, here at the War Department and in State capitals throughout the Nation, plans for getting the draft machinery into operation were rushed to completion. An executive order setting up a national conscription administration and promulgating draft regulations, is expected to be issued by President Roosevelt today.

Don't Tell a Soul: Employes Give Hopkins a Robe

Harry Hopkins, former Secretary of Commerce, has a bright, new silk bathrobe to take with him when he retires to the Hyde Park Library, but he's not supposed to know about it until 12:01 p. m. today.

The bathrobe, carefully wrapped, was given to Hopkins by some of his top associates in the Commerce Department during a farewell lunch at the Hay-Adams yesterday.

It developed, though, that there is a rule of Government service forbidding employes to give their superiors presents. They figured, however, that they would be perfectly safe if the package remained unwrapped until after Hopkins' successor, Jesse Jones, is sworn in at noon today.

Plan Raid Shelter Survey in Md.

Wave on Wave Of Italian Planes Bomb British Base

By Allen Raymond
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, Sept. 18.—Wave after wave of Italian planes have been bombing since yesterday the railhead and airfield at Mersa Matruh, British base in Egypt 126 miles from Alexandria, the Italian high command said tonight.

While the main body of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's troops has been consolidating their position at Sidi Barrani, seacoast terminus of Great Britain's second line of defense in Egypt, the air force is trying to soften resistance at the terminus on the third line in preparation for the next Fascist advance.

Meanwhile, according to Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, Italian troops have turned inland at Sidi Barrani and are engaged in protecting the flank of the main forces against raiding British armored unit.

Heat Reaches 140

Italian newspapers agree that the sandstorms and heat are more dreaded than enemy forces yet encountered. It is said the heat in the Egyptian battle area has reached 140 degrees Fahrenheit.

From the accounts one gets a picture of mass troop operations, in which loads of water are carried in an advance well protected by air superiority.

Of last night's operations the Italian communique said:

"Our squadrons have bombed continuously the military and railway supply depot at Mersa Matruh and the flying field. All objectives were heavily hit despite violent enemy antiaircraft fire.

"Our bombers have also bombed and machine-gunned enemy forces on the ground near Mersa Matruh."

A supplementary communique told of the bombing of a British naval squadron in the Eastern Mediterranean last night and the great expansion of Italian air activity over the Egyptian field of combat between Sidi Barrani and the Nile.

It was admitted that British counterattacks on Bengazi and Derna, in Libya, caused the sinking of a barge and a torpedo boat and the setting of fires at Bangazi.

Attack Desert Troops

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 18.—British airmen heavily attacked Fascist desert troops at Sidi Barrani, military headquarters announced.

The British aerial counter-attack extended from that newly won Italian base clear along the Mediterranean coast into Libya, it was said officially.

Singled out especially for bombardment were heavy artillery and other equipment which the Fascists had moved into Sidi Barrani.

The British said the Italians were busy attempting to get their cannon into position when bombs rained among them.

British Beat Off Seven Day Raids; Many Fire Bombs Fall on Capital

BULLETIN

London, Sept. 19 (AP).—The government estimated officially today 90 persons were killed and 350 severely injured in last night's raids on London, the most intense night attack of the war.

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Sept. 19. Thundering tons of high explosives showered on battered London and its suburbs last night and early today from a steadily increasing force of Nazi attackers who left heavy damage and a mounting list of casualties in the empire capital.

More planes took part in the raid—the twelfth overnight attack since Germany began her "all out" assaults on London—than in the Tuesday-Wednesday overnight raid which caused heavy casualties.

The German bombers caused great destruction in the slums of East London in the early phases of the raids. Then they turned their attention to the fashionable sectors of the capital as well, subjecting them to heavy bombing.

In the latest punishing attack, coughing men and women stumbled from fashionable apartments after direct hits were scored by incendiary bombs in central London.

Other Cities Suffer

Not only London was raided during the night. German planes likewise were over southeast, southwest, and northeast England, and Wales.

[International News Service reported also that a "northwest English town" had suffered its heaviest attack of the war.

[For several nights past British announcements have refered to repeated German air attacks on a "northwest English town," and invariably identified it later as Liverpool. German communiques also referred to heavy damage in nightly raids on Liverpool.

[With a population of some 900,000, Liverpool is Britain's second port and fourth city, and now is of great importance as an entrance for war supplies.]

London's antiaircraft gun barrage brought down at least two of the raiders—one of them a Junkers 88, Germany's latest type of bombing plane, which fell on the house occupied by Walter Grabner, head of the London office of Time and Life magazines. The other—its type not given—fell in Hyde Park.

The raiders violently strafed the center of London, dropping fat, blazing oil bombs in an effort to set fires in the city to guide them to their targets. Flame bombs showered over the central area of London.

A tremendous explosion jarred a building in central London; a row of houses in north London was demolished; and a heavy bomb fell near a shopping center, throwing debris high into the air.

Neither Ray Nor Gun . . .

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Britain is experimenting with a new method of bringing down German aircraft, which already has proved successful in defending small vital areas, informed sources said tonight.

The nature of the device remains secret, but the informants said it was not a gun, not a ray and had nothing to do with balloons. It was said it had not yet been used in the London barrage.

The informants said that if the device could be developed it would add great strength to Britain's general defenses. They asserted it was comparatively easy to manufacture and required only a small force to operate because of its simple principles.

Raids on London's Populous East End Go On Without Respite

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Sept. 18.—German air raids on London which, according to the official news agency D. N. B., have destroyed "entire residential sections" in the populous east end, continued without respite today, despite reportedly inclement weather.

Military information released tonight stated that a freight yard, docks and harbor appointments of Tilbury, opposite Gravesend, were successfully bombed this morning. Particularly heavy damage, the Germans declare, was inflicted on the railroad yard.

A large oil tank depot at Port Victoria on the Lower Thames, this report continues, was also attacked this morning and three large oil tanks were set afire while a small tanker was sunk.

Claim British Lose 2,139 Planes

In the course of these attacks, the Germans add, a number of small air battles developed over Kent and the Lower Thames, and 15 British pursuit planes were shot down while only three German machines were lost.

According to German figures, the British have lost 2,139 planes since August 1.

British plane losses have been so heavy, the German press declares, that German fliers encounter ever decreasing resistance in carrying out the tasks assigned to them. According to the Warschauer Zeitung, furthermore, the R. A. F. has been so badly depleted by constant en-

Voters Choose Forgotten Man Who Likes Cheese

Boston, Sept. 18 (AP).—Massachusetts nominated Thomas J. Buckley for State auditor in yesterday's primaries—and today the only thing they knew about him was that he likes cheese sandwiches.

While voters tried to learn more about their candidate, a former State auditor, Thomas H. Buckley, was receiving congratulations on a nomination he didn't win. He didn't enter the contest this year and had issued public statements explaining he wasn't a candidate.

A newcomer to politics, the nominee polled more votes than the combined total of his three veteran opponents without waging a campaign or spending a cent. His fellow Democrats want to meet him so they can map the fall campaign, but none of the politicians knows him or even knows where he is.

Buckley lives in a Beacon Hill lodging house, but his landlady said he went "somewhere on Cape Cod for a few days." It was said that a campaign committee has gone to the cape to get pictures and a statement from Buckley, but no one seemed to know who comprised the committee.

A woman storekeeper supplied the most information about the nominee. "He's a nice young man," she said. "He used to work on the WPA. He comes in here often and buys cheese sandwiches."

English Fliers Rain Explosives On Invasion Ports and Boats

By the United Press

London, Sept. 18.—One of the biggest fleets of British bombers ever hurled into action has delivered a "terrific onslaught" against Adolf Hitler's "invasion spearheads" along the Channel coast, the Air Ministry said tonight.

As this announcement was made, the R. A. F. returned to the attack in what appeared to be their most savage raid of the war.

Bombs were throwing up an "almost uninterrupted wall of fire" along the French coastline, observers at Dover reported.

The Channel remained slightly choppy tonight, but the howling winds had died down and the weather generally was good, with the threat of a possible Nazi invasion looming larger.

Scores Watch Attack

Great numbers of British bombers swept across the narrow Straits of Dover and heaped tons of bombs on German ship, gun and troop concentrations around Calais, Cap Cris Nez and Boulogne.

The bombardment was by far the most terrific ever seen or heard from the English Cliffs, and the scores of Britons who watched the attack could see the flashes of bombs that seemed to be falling everywhere.

The bomb flashes were mingled with tremendous barrage of German antiaircraft fire.

The return of "invasion weather" was accompanied by an open challenge to Adolf Hitler from Gen. Sir Alan Brook, commander in chief of Britain's home defense forces, to send his hordes against Britain and have them "thrown back into the sea."

The air ministry said that massed British bombers in night assaults had "relentlessly" blasted at Nazi ship concentrations and warships—supposedly sinking a destroyer—all along the German-held Channel coast.

While the R. A. F. was showering bombs on this "potential invasion spearhead" from Denmark to the Bay of Biscay, a communique said, other bombers flew northeastward into Germany "to pound the right wing of the enemy's line at Hamburg."

Further heavy destruction was said to have been done to strategic German railroad yards, junctions and supply depots "which already have taken so much punishment."

2 Big Ships Wrecked

Cherbourg, France's big Atlantic port, was attacked by Blenheim and Beaufort bombers of the coastal command in the night attack and two large ships were smashed and blown up, the air ministry said.

"Steadily increasing its pressure on the German-held Channel ports, the bomber command of the R. A. F. yesterday sent one of the largest forces of British bombers so far used in the war to continue the relentless 'forestalling' offensive which for nearly a fortnight now has been going on against the German invasion plan," it was stated.

Other developments in Britain's "offensive defense" included:

1. Disclosure of daylight attacks by British bombers on the Belgian port of Ostend and its shipping, a convoy off Zeebrugge, Nazi barges off the Dutch coast and an airdrome at Ijmunden. Other ports heavily bombed were Hamburg, Antwerp, Flushing, Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne and Terneuzen.

Political Activity Means Ouster, Civil Service Employes Told

By Edward Ryan

Federal civil service employes who violate the Hatch Act can expect only one punishment, removal from their jobs, no matter how trivial the offense, Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, said yesterday.

His announcement, presented at the United Federal Workers convention in Almas Temple, was a reversal of earlier commission statements about what the Hatch Act penalties for Government workers would be.

Mitchell, in at least two other speeches since the enlarged "clean politics" act was signed, had indicated that the Civil Service Commission would have discretion to make the punishment fit the Hatch Act violation for employes in the classified civil service.

"The decision is now," Mitchell told the convention, "that any civil service employe who violates the Hatch Act must be removed from the service."

Mitchell explained that one group of Government employes was exempt from the commission's new ruling. The commission's jurisdiction in Hatch Act enforcement for Government workers extends only to "classified" employes, those covered by the Civil Service Act.

Enforcing the Hatch Act for non-civil service employes, he explained, is in the hands of the Justice Department, and the agencies where these employes work. About 275,000 of more than 1,000,000 Government workers are classed as non-civil service.

Mitchell said that this ruling followed close study of the first and second Hatch Acts and their connection with the Civil Service Com-

Boat Burns, Sinks

5 Saved After Dive in Potomac From Flaming Motor Launch

Three men and two women were rescued from the Potomac River at 10 o'clock last night after a 26-foot speed boat burned and sank in the Georgetown Channel about a half-mile from the Gravelly Point Airport.

One man was slightly burned. The others escaped injury.

To park police who drove them to an address in Ballston, Va., after they had been rescued by employes at the airport they gave the names James H. Brown, Samuel Smith, Mrs. Samuel Smith, James Zimmerman and Mrs. Evelyn Howell.

The boat caught fire when one of the men was priming the motor with gasoline after it stalled. The flaming fuel ignited his clothing. He jumped into the river with a life-preserver. The others quickly followed, also taking life-preservers, as flames swept the craft.

The glow of the fire attracted the attention of John Clardy, 26, 3801 Columbia Pike, Arlington, Va., an airport safety inspector, as he was leaving the administration building to make his rounds of the field.

Clary, a lieutenant of the Arlington Rescue Squad, ran to the wharf, where he was joined by E. Kettner, an employer of the airport warehouse. With Harry Miller, 28, assistant chief of the Glen Echo Volunteer Fire Department and also employed at the field, the pair ran to the warehouse, got oars for a rowboat tied up at the wharf and rowed out into the river, directed by flames from the boat and the cries of its occupants in the water.

One by one, Clary and Kettner hauled the five into the rowboat and with a load of seven in a craft made to carry three, returned to shore, where the rescued were turned over to Park Policemen H. M. Berger and G. G. Fulcher, who took them to Woodrow street in Ballston.

thath the relentless bombings of enemy objectives by the R. A. F. has curtailed German aircraft production by 30 per cent "while lack of sleep has affected the morale of German workers." The British attacks, he added, are interfering with the Nazi war machine by bombing transport systems, aircraft and munitions factories and oil depots.

3—Disclosure that night after night the R. A. F. has been laying mines in German-occupied harbors and territorial waters all the way from the Norwegian coast to the Bay of Biscay. "Even in strictly preserved and heavily defended waters." It was said that "thousands of tons" of German shipping had been destroyed by the mines.

Nazi Plans Reported Spoiled

Meanwhile, rumors reached London that Hitler has started to return to Norwegian shipowners hundreds of small ships which had been requisitioned for the launching of a large-scale invasion.

This information came from a Norwegian just arrived in London by airplane from Stockholm.

He said that the Germans had requisitioned almost every seaworthy craft in Norway during the last two months and that after the seizures started there was a period of intensive preparation and training for an invasion of Britain.

Fishermen and other owners of vessels were astonished, the informant said, when last week German authorities began restoring their craft to them.

Some quarters took this to mean that Hitler's plan for an invasion of Britain has been postponed or altered—perhaps because of the British air blows upon his bases or the rapidly changing weather over the Channel.

Commons Has Secret Session On Shelters

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 18.—Commons went into urgent secret session tonight on problems created by the aerial bombardment of London.

Only the briefest communique was issued on this session. It said: "Members representing London and the other constituencies affected drew attention to the many problems which have arisen. The minister of home security and the minister of health replied to the debate."

Though this session was secret, the problems are not.

The first is that of shelters. For the past few years the government has been urged to construct deep bomb-proof shelters. After detailed consideration they rejected these requests and decided to build splinter-proof shelters above ground and make available steel backyard shelters, which, in the last few days, proved excellent protection against splinters.

Developments of the last week, however, led to bitter criticism of these shelters on two counts. First, they are not bombproof. Second, they are not large enough to be used as dormitories in these all-night raids.

Though the government has established rest centers for people who have been bombed out, many of these people are refusing to go to these centers because they do not have adequate shelters.

Instead they drift into subway tunnels. The government's argument against large, deep shelters is that it is inadvisable to gather large numbers of people together. To this opponents say more people will die of pneumonia than from bombs if they are forced to sleep in backyard shelters this winter.

In addition to criticism of the government's shelter policy, many Laborites are critical of the slowness with which the Government is taking care of people bombed out of their homes. Some of these people are kept in rest centers for a week or several days without hot food while officials are trying to arrange transportation to take them to new billets.

In order to try and satisfy some of these criticisms the Government today announced that people rendered homeless will be granted travel vouchers which will enable them to get to the homes of friends or they will keep them at rest centers until they can be billeted. Financial assistance will also be given to those in temporary need and their billeting allowances will be paid by the government.

Flying Artist's Conception Of Night Raid on England

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HOW GERMANY SEES THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN—Nazi bombers dominate a sky lighted by British searchlights and studded with shell bursts in this drawing of a night raid on a British industrial area by Alfred Dudda, a German flier-artist. Dudda said he witnessed this scene and made sketches on which drawing was based as raid progressed partially wrecked by German bombs, Edward R. Murrow, chief of the C. B. S. European staff, said in a broadcast.

[Murrow said that the two top floors of the building were in the street but that a survey was necessary before the complete damage could be determined.

[Columbia's London office is about 200 yards from the headquarters of the British Broadcasting Corporation.]

There were piles of smashed glass along the streets in the heart of London.

Big Hotel Struck

Bombs struck the stone coping on the upper floor of a big hotel and damaged six rooms. The upper floors had been vacated and there were no casualties.

This latest attack on London came after seven daylight attacks on this endlessly harassed city—a city which lessly harassed city—a city which military attaches agreed already had withstood in recent weeks a greater bombardment from the skies than ever was loosed before, from Warsaw to Rotterdam.

British reports up to 10 o'clock last night indicated that at least 46 German aircraft had been destroyed yesterday against the admitted loss of nine British planes and four pilots.

During yesterday's seven daylight attacks here, the air ministry said, not a bomb fell in the city itself, although explosives killed an undetermined number of persons along the Thames estuary.

The mightiest of all the almost endless flights of daylight raiders never reached the city at all. It was broken up in a thunderous battle high over the Thames Estuary by the coordinated counter-attack of British fighter pilots and the smoking anti-aircraft guns below.

Some 300 German planes were in this great wave and it was noted that the Nazi bombers were extraordinarily outnumbered by their protecting fighter craft.

Just as the invaders came in over the estuary, British fighter planes came down from above 15,000 feet. British interceptors rose angrily from below, and British guns bellowed in the crisp autumn air. At least ten Germans were reported shot down. Most of the rest, it was said, withdrew in disorder.

Skirmishers Get Through

But despite this success, one of the greatest single British air victories of the war, other German raiders broke through the outer defenses all during the day. Those reaching London were in small units; once three German bombers were noted above the city, flying along in single file like infantrymen on patrol.

Whatever is to come, men with strong memories of the smashing of Warsaw, Barcelona, Madrid and Rotterdam agreed that they had not been hit as heavily as had London.

But, in this group the consensus nevertheless was that the Nazis had not achieved their main purposes—to disorganize London's communications as a preliminary to invasion and to demoralize the population.

The day's raids on London—themselves unprecedented for their frequency—followed another new high in attack Tuesday night that lasted for 9 hours and 34 minutes, the longest yet.

The government said it feared casualties from the night assault "may be heavier than in recent nights" as Nazi bombers battered all sections of the city.

In that assault, new damage was done in London's popular Oxford street business section; hit were three of London's world-famous stores—John Lewis & Co., Bourne & Hollingsworth and D. H. Evans & Co.

Merchandise was scattered like blown leaves. Wax models were torn limb from limb. Some men and women were casualties.

At the John Lewis store, two charred walls remained. Of the three firms, only the shop of Bourne & Hollingsworth looked as if it ever could be used to sell anything again.

A delayed action bomb dropped by German raiders in the vicinity of the United States Embassy in Grosvenor Square was removed without incident yesterday. During the night the people of the Embassy had taken refuge in the first floor.

gagements with the enemy that it is now forced to use third-line machines, including bombers.

German armed reconnaissance planes, meanwhile took off this morning to view the effects of last night's raids.

In one place, the Germans say, a tremendous crater was visible from which clouds of smoke were pouring. The nature of the crater leads the Germans to suppose the London subway had been hit. In addition, reconnaissance pilots reported extensive new fires about the London docks.

Raids Intensified

Last night's raids, according to the German High Command, were carried out with "increasing intensity." The West India and Victoria docks, among the largest in the world, were struck with bombs of all calibers and new fires were caused. They are used chiefly for unloading foodstuffs, the Germans declare, and there are a large number of warehouses in their immediate vicinity.

So much shipping activity was observed on the Thames today, moreover, that the Germans concluded the British were endeavoring to evacuate as much material as possible from storage houses in the vicinity of the docks.

Water and gas works, railroad stations and other military objectives, the High Command declares, were similarly attacked yesterday and last night. Bow Station as well as a railway junction were damaged while a number of airplanes were destroyed on the ground near Tilbury and Gravesend.

There is only one airport in London which until yesterday was intact, the Germans state, and that is the famed former commercial airport of Croydon. It, however, as well as the air base at Barton-Bendish, in the north of the city, was bombed and a number of airplanes were destroyed on the ground. Northeast of Hastings, furthermore, the Germans assert, they set afire army barracks.

Liverpool Plane Works Attacked

Yesterday and last night Liverpool was the objective of Nazi bombers. Particular attention was paid to airplane factories located at Liverpool-Speke, which the German high command declares were dealt heavy blows. The factories here belong to Vickers-Armstrong and are situated directly adjoining the Liverpool Airport, some 5 miles from the heart of the city. Wellington bombers were formerly manufactured here, but the plants have lately devoted most of their energies, the Germans claim, to turning out Spitfires.

With London, the shipping center, already in bad shape, and Liverpool also feeling the serious effects of the Reich air arm, the Germans attach great importance to last night's attack on Glasgow reported by the German high command.

Glasgow, on the western coast of Scotland, is a goodly distance from German air bases and is the second largest port on the western coast of the British Isles. Here, furthermore, are the most important shipbuilding yards of the British merchant marine, as well as a large number of drydocks. Since the German attacks have increased in destructive power, it is said here, Glasgow has been used as an unloading port for supplies destined for the north of England.

A "few" British planes flew into western Germany late tonight, it is reported, and dropped bombs on "non-military objectives and residential sections," but apparently made no attempt to reach Berlin.

Last night, according to the high command, "British fliers attacked residential districts and settlements in north and west Germany with bombs and damaged several dwellings." The objectives of the enemy attacks included Hamburg, Bremen, Hamm, Krefeld, Neuss and the province of Koblenz-Trier.

Ribbentrop, Duce To Discuss Spain

French island colony of Madagascar, in the Indian Ocean.

One usually reliable source indicated the Rome conference might develop a secret treaty or even a public pronouncement of Spanish adherence to the Axis—although Spain is unable to do very much in a military or economic manner.

Besides Serrano Suner, Gen. Attilio Teruzzi, minister of Italian Africa, conferred with Hitler yesterday. It appeared that Italian operations against the British in Egypt were discussed.

Italy Expects "New Phase"

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Sept. 18.—German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop arrives in Rome at 12:50 tomorrow afternoon, and while the chief purpose of his visit is surrounded with secrecy, it is everywhere admitted a new phase in the war is about to begin.

The universal guess is the trip has something to do with Spain—perhaps even a tripartite announcement more or less involving Spain in the war—but a few other possibilities are also being considered.

Great pressure is being brought to bear on Madrid to abandon its nonbelligerency, but the most important possibility is a pact which would permit Spain to play a passive role while Italian and German planes, submarines and warships use her bases. The threat to Gibraltar would then be acute.

Another possibility, denied in German circles, is that the three powers will reaffirm the anti-Comintern pact. This report started to get around yesterday even before it was known that Ribbentrop planned to come here. It seems based on the belief that the Germans consider they have the Danube Basin and the Balkans tightly sewed up against Russia and are getting so little out of their pact with Moscow that the time has come to drop it. However, the best opinion here considers it highly unlikely that Germany is ready to break with Russia.

Finally there are decisions to be taken sooner or later regarding Greece and Syria and it may be the time has come to make them.

Another possibility is that Ribbentrop comes primarily to prepare the ground for a meeting between Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini. It will be recalled that he came here on March 10 and eight days later occurred the historic Brenner Pass parley which preceded the invasion of Norway and the beginning of the active phase of the war. It would be well in accordance with Axis procedure to have a dramatic conference of the two leaders before the expected invasion of England takes place.

There are a number of minor problems, among them developments in French Morocco and other French colonies where Gen. Charles de Gaulle's efforts as leader of "free" Frenchmen oin London are causing worry; other colonial problems which colonial minister Attilio Terruzzi discussed in Berlin, and a final settlement of the Rumanian affair. Ribbentrop will also hear the latest plans regarding Egypt.

However the general belief is that all these problems will be quickly examined and the only thing which really counts is Spain.

Spain Agrees on Oil Limit

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Sept. 18.—Great Britain and Spain have reached an agreement regulating Spain's imports of oil and designed to eliminate leakage of this valuable war material from the Iberian Peninsula to Germany and Italy.

The ministry of economic warfare said Spain would be permitted to import oil sufficient for dometsic uses up to the limit of the country's consumption before the civil war. Thus it is believed Spain will have no oil to spare for lubrication of the Berlin-Rome Axis.

Africa's Fate Decided

Stockholm, Sept. 18.—As a result of discussions between the Italian colonial minister, Gen. Attilio Teruzzi, and Gen. Franz Ritter von Epp, who might soon become German colonial minister, agreement has been reached between the two Axis powers on the partition of Africa after they have won the war, according to the Svenska Dagbladet.

Italy is to get North Africa, Egypt included, it said; the former German colonies in Central Africa will return to Germany while South Africa will be left free to decide its own fate.

used in the October 16 registration and subsequent classification and selection of men have still to be voted by Congress, but preparations are going forward in anticipation of early Congressional action.

In another defense development, officials revealed that a Model B-299 Y, four-engined plane, commercial version of the Army's big B-17 bomber, has been released for sale abroad. The Boeing company of Seattle, was authorized "some time ago," it was said, to negotiate for the sale of commercial planes, but it was not disclosed as to whether any orders were placed.

Britain Seeking Bombers

Great Britain is understood to be seeking some of the 59 of the bombers now in service or some of those now on order for the Army. The giant craft take more than a year to build.

To speed the conscription program, the War Department is ordering about 300 National Guard officers to active duty. Officers attached to staffs will take up administrative posts in the draft machinery.

The President is also expected to name a national director for the draft shortly, Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Sershey, executive officer of the Army and Navy Selective Service Committee, is prominently mentioned for the post. The names of former Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion are also heard in connection with the office.

N.Y.A. Plans "Toughening" Program

The National Youth Administration announced yesterday that a nationwide program would be launched to "toughen physically" and otherwise improve the health of N. Y. A. employes who are not in school.

The program, it was said, will be conducted in cooperation with the Federal Public Health Service and local health officials. Youths assigned to the N. Y. A. out-of-school work program will be given physical examinations, and State-wide projects will be conducted in health education and for training young people in services related to health, officials declared.

Willkie Solicits Advice of Party

G. O. P. Congressmen Urged in Letters To Make Suggestions

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Wendell L. Willkie is soliciting by letter the advice and working cooperation of Republican members of Congress, it was learned last night.

The Republican nominee is inviting campaign suggestions, thanking some members for advice and aid already given, urging personal conference with others and suggesting campaign speeches.

Bidding for close party teamwork, the letters vary with the individual addressed, but in each case Willkie urges cooperation of and pledges cooperation with G. O. P. House and Senate members.

"I am very anxious to work in cooperation with the members of Congress and give them every assistance," he said in one letter to a high-ranking House Republican.

Closely following a reported rift between the Republican nominee and House members over divergent views on conscription and delaying the draft, the letters, Republican spokesmen said, were having "an extremely beneficial effect" and members were responding with "practical" advice.

Willkie's gesture to Congress was the first fruit of harmony conferences last week with Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican vice presidential nominee, and Representative Martin of Massachusetts, Republican national chairman.

Many Offer to Speak

Ranking minority members on important committees are understood to have communicated their views on major legislative measures for Willkie's guidance and many have offered to make speeches where they would be helpful.

Some of the replies have been "quite frank" it was said, and none have been released for publication. One of these letters suggested that G. O. P. members were in a position to render more assistance to the party's candidate then he could to them, but both could and should cooperate.

Another of the "frank" replies was said to have been written by Representative Bartel Jonkman, of Michigan, a new Republican member, but Jonkman declined to disclose its contents. "That letter was strictly between Mr. Willkie and myself," he said.

One typical letter from Willkie to a prominent Senate Republican was written before the G. O. P. nominee left Rushville on his cross-country speaking tour and intimately discussed Willkie's campaign plans.

Seeks Advise

Willkie wrote this Senate stalwart:

"Within a few days I shall start my first campaign trip into the country. When I return from that trip there will be less than five weeks prior to the election.

"I shall also put a large part of this remaining period on the road. I hope for an opportunity to confer with you in the near future, and obtain the benefit of your experienced advice. Meanwhile, I should like to have you write me any suggestions you see fit to make. . . .

"Now that the campaign is underway there will be a substantial demand, I know, for your appearance in various sections of the country I hope that you will be able to make at least several major addresses for the benefit of the entire ticket, either on worthwhile engagements that should come to you or similar requests for your appearance received by the speaker's bureau.

"The service being rendered by you to the party is invaluable. I cannot tell you how much I appreciate all you are doing for it and for me.

"All kinds of good luck.

WENDELL WILLKIE."

Party Rift Healing

Some recent party differences have related to the prevalence of so-called "amateurs" in Willkie's advisory ranks. At the suggestion of some of the "professionals," two practical politicians are accompanying him on his trip—Representative Charles A. Halleck, of Indidana, who nominated him, and former Representative John Hollister, law partner of Senator Taft, of Ohio.

Meanwhile, some of Willkie's pre-Philadelphia Republican opponents were beginning to strike out actively in the campaign for Willkie's election.

In Cleveland yesterday, Senator Taft, Willkie's close competitor in balloting for the Republican nomination, announced he will take the stump in New England and in the West for the Republican nominee.

Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, who likewise sought the Republican nomination, heads West today for a speech in Cleveland, and shortly will leave for New England to take over his duties as assistant to National Committee Chairman Martin and general "trouble shooter" in the Northeastern sector.

The Middle West, equally vital with New England as a decisive campaign factor, will attract Senatorial speaking talent for both Republican and Democratic tickets as soon as Congress recesses or adjourns.

Norris to Take to Stump

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, supporting President Roosevelt despite his views against a third term, said he will return to Nebraska to make some Roosevelt speeches.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, believing with Norris that the corn and wheat belts will be the campaign testing ground, predicted Kansas will go Republican, and said he will go there to make speeches for Willkie.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee and recently named labor adviser of the Democratic mid-Western campaign, said he plans to leave shortly for Chicago headquarters, and will make Roosevelt speeches as well in Utah and California.

tries to solve it himself.

"This is why he has accumulated so much power and spent so much money."

Willkie criticized the President for not having accorded more discretion to members of his Defense Advisory Board, saying "he has not even appointed a chairman."

"What this country needs is a little faith—faith not only in its industries, but faith in its people," said the candidate. "I have that faith, and if you elect me to office you will see the difference."

Willkie came to California with the reputation of being the most formidable campaigner the G. O. P. has had since Teddy Roosevelt's day. He was told that the State—the loss of which cost Charles Evans Hughes the Presidency in 1916—was wide open in this campaign year of 1940, and might very well land in his column with any kind of breaks. A major break, of course, would be for Senator Johnson, described by President Roosevelt as no longer liberal, to give Willkie a pat on the back. How much of a hold the white-haired Johnson still has on California's affection was shown recently when he triumphed over what he called Roosevelt's "purge" effort by winning both the Republican and Democratic nominations, thereby clinching another six-year term in the Senate.

Much Hangs on Speech

What Johnson will do—if he is to do anything—may be determined by what Willkie says in his foreign affairs speech tomorrow night at 8 o'clock (11 p. m. Washington time). The speech, which will be broadcast, will be delivered in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. A crowd of 100,000 is predicted.

Willkie, wearing a blue suit and saying he never felt better in his life, joined his campaign train at San Bernardino, where a band greeted him with the strains of "The Washington Post March."

The robust Hoosier had spent the earlier part of the day in an air transport. Taking off from Albuquerque, N. Mex., he flew to Pheonix, Ariz. There he addressed one of the largest political gatherings in the history of the State.

From Phoenix he flew to March Field, Calif., the Army's big air base on the West Coast, and from there motored to his train at San Bernardino.

Huge and exurberant crowds are now meeting the G. O. P. nominee at every stop. Crowds, of course, also turned out, for William Jennings Bryan, Al Smith, and other candidates who went down to defeat, but just the same the people traveling with Willkie feel that the gatherings are significant.

Willkie brought cheers from the crowd at Phoenix, when he assailed Federal purchases of Argentine beef, which have brought waves of protest from the Western cattle country.

One way to revive America's domestic economy, he told the Arizonans, would be to "have the American Navy buy American instead of Argentine beef."

In his appearances today he continued to pound at what he termed the Rooseveltian doctrine of "the indispensable man," and declared again and again that the two things needed in America are construction of a strong defense and revitalization of the domestic economy.

Strong Economy Best Defense

In a sweltering day of campaigning, he declared at Phoenix:

"We must build a force of airplanes and armament so strong that no dictator will dare to strike. But that will not be adequate to carry America through this trying time. We must rehabilitate our domestic economy."

Even if there were a choice between the two courses he would place his faith in the latter, he said, for "if the dictators could look across the ocean and see a great people at work" here they never would attack the United States.

Declaring that he is "no indispensable man," he still had "enough sense" to realize that buying Argentine beef would injure Arizona's cattle industry.

He charged the Administration is "sabotaging American industry" and dwelt on the danger of ever-increasing debt.

The crowd laughed as he declared that "every shirt I see, every hat I see and every coat—if there are any—is simply saturated with hidden taxes."

At San Bernardino he carried forward the same ideas.

Declaring that the "democratic way of life is in the test" while bombs "are being dropped down on England by that heinous totalitarian, Adolf Hitler," he urged again a strong defense and revitalized economy.

"I've come into California to preach that kind of doctrine," he said. "You know the kind of language I speak and the kind of ideals I have because many of you came from the same kind of Midwest schools I did."

No Reason for Unemployed

"I want to build the greatest defense program this country has ever seen, and I want it built by men who know how to produce.

"Roosevelt never saw a factory gate until after he got into politics."

The nominee declared at Orange "There isn't the slightest reason in dynamic America why there should be one unemployed man," and at Santa Ana expressed the belief he could put men back to work.

At Riverside, the candidate told a trainside crowd that he knew of no way to get votes except to "be frank and candid."

"I want to carry California," he said, "and I want to get it on the basis of the principles I represent."

At Anaheim, Willkie said that if democracy prevail "how puny will look those dictators across the seas." He reported his "admiration for that fighting, fearless liberal, Hiram Johnson."

In Corona, Calif., a citrus section, he said:

"You should not have had it so tough," he said. "The people who buy your products are the people employed in industry. When factories are working and people are employed, then your products are purchased. When the opposite is true, your products are not bought."

Rep. Warren Made Temporary Leader

Key Democrats In House Delay Decision on Caucus

Representative Lindsay C. Warren of North Carolina, recently named Comptroller General by the President, will take over the Administration's House floor leadership duties today pending a Democratic caucus to elect a majority leader.

Warren was designated by Speaker Rayburn to handle leadership routine and program announcements as key House Democrats delayed a decision on whether to caucus in the next few days or postpone the election until next session.

Rayburn, chosen Speaker by acclamation following Speaker Bankhead's death, also advised contenders for the leadership post that he is taking no hand in the race. It will be up to leadership candidates and other Democratic members of the House to decide on a date for the caucus, Rayburn indicated.

Representative Warren, who will take over the Comptroller General's office as soon as Congress adjourns or recesses, is understood to be willing to serve in the interim. A close friend of the President and a skilled parliamentarian, he has presided during House action on most of the big New Deal measures and played a leading role in framing and pushing to passage the President Government reorganization program.

Present plans call for a House recess today over the remainder of the week, and Warren will return then to North Carolina to wind up his personal affairs preparatory to pinch-hitting in the leadership role and stepping thence to his 15-year appointment as Comptroller General.

Neither Rayburn nor Warren would comment on recent reports that the North Carolinian might be asked to serve out the few remaining days of the session, permitting election of a permanent leader to go over until January in the interest of harmony.

REP. LINDSAY WARREN

2 Contenders Want Early Caucus

At least two of the leading candidates, Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Representative Patrick J. Boland, House whip, favor an early caucus and election at once of a permanent leader. Two other contenders, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, and Representative Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, are expressing no preference as to the actual date of the caucus.

McCormack, whose backers are claiming a commanding number of pledges for all sections, is chairman of the Democratic caucus, and has the power to call a caucus at any time. But friends indicated he will not do so until he sounds out the sentiment of House Democrats. Another alternative would be a caucus by petition of members. Any 50 Democratic members can force a caucus by petition.

Leadership plans are understood to have been thoroughly discussed by Democrats returning from Jasper, Ala., funeral ceremonies for Speaker Bankhead, but no decision was reached as neither McCormack nor Boland were on the trip.

Woodrum "Much Interested"

While word was passed on the train that neither the President nor Rayburn would take a hand in the contest, some friends of McCormack expressed the belief yesterday that he was favored at the White House because of the geographic position of Massachusetts and McCormack's record in the House.

Pennsylvanians likewise were contending that Boland should be chosen because of the politically strategic position of the Keystone State in the coming elections.

Representative Woodrum, who said he was "very much interested" in the post, "but not actively campaigning," had the backing of an active Virginia delegation, while the influential Tennessee delegation is managing the candidacy of Representative Cooper.

The compromise plan to postpone the election was first put forward to stave off any bitter battle for the key job on the eve of the national election.

mines that the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket will carry New York State in November."

All Republican Congressmen successfully withstood contested renominations including Hamilton Fish, New Deal opponent from the Twenty-Sixth District, encompassing the President's home county of Dutchess; Frank Crowther, Francis D. Culkin, E. Harold Cluett, Edwin A. Hall, Walter G. Andrews and J. Francis Harter.

Connecticut Republicans, meeting in convention yesterday, selected Paul L. Cornell, a preparatory school owner, as their candidate for the Senate. He will oppose Senator Francis T. Maloney (Democrat), in November. For Governor, the Republicans named Raymond E. Baldwin, the incumbent.

The other members of the 1938 winning ticket renominated were Secretary of State Sara B. Crawford, State Treasurer Joseph E. Talbot, State Comptroller Fred R. Zeller and Representative-at-large Boleslaus J. Monkiewicz.

Opposing Gov. Baldwin in his campaign for reelection is Robert A. Hurley (Democrat), State public works commissioner, and Jasper McLevy (Socialist), Mayor of Bridgeport.

Wisconsin Republicans nominated Fred H. Clausen, a farm machinery manufacturer, for Senator, and the Democrats chose James E. Finnegan, antithird termer and former attorney general. Senator Robert M. La Follette was unopposed for renomination on the Progressive ticket.

Partial returns gave increasing leads to three of the four Republican Representatives opposed for renomination. The fourth, Joshua L. Johns, trailed by a few votes behind Francis J. Dillett, of Marinette, in returns from less than one-fourth of the Eighth District.

The remaining incumbent Representatives, three Republicans and two Progressives, were unopposed for renomination. In the Third District, voters were nominating candidates for the seat left vacant by the death of Harry W. Griswold, Republican.

In the Massachusetts Senatorial election in November, the voters will choose between Senator David I. Walsh, who was renominated without opposition, and Henry Parkman, former corporation counsel of Boston.

Another political development yesterday was an announcement by Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension leader, that he would campaign actively for the Willkie-McNary ticket. He said at a press conference in New York that he would make a 6,000-mile trip in behalf of the Republican candidates. At the same time, he said, he would speak for his pension plan.

Political Activity Means Ouster, Civil Service Aides Told

mission's own rules on political activity.

Rule No. 1 under the 57-year-old Civil Service Act, it was pointed out, bars employes in the executive civil service from political activity. Under this rule the Civil Service Commission defined political activity, admitted that "it is impossible to give a complete list of the particular activities" included in the definition.

Mitchell explained yesterday that the first Hatch Act made removal from the service mandatory for anyone who violated it, the second Hatch Act specifically included as forbidden activities everything in the Civil Service Commission's definition.

As a result, said Mitchell, the tiniest violation of any of the Civil Service Commission's political activity rules is automatically a violation of the Hatch Act, with removal from the service the only possible penalty.

While the commission administered its own political activity rules, it was explained, the penalties could range from a reprimand to suspension for a few days, and on to removal from the service. Mitchell said that last year, out of more than 160 reported violations, 12 resulted in discharges.

Common Violation

One frequent violation, he said, was the charge that any employe carried voters to the polls on election day. Formerly, he said, this would mean that the employe would be suspended from his job without pay for a few days—now it would mean removal.

"That is a very serious situation for the employes," said Mitchell. "Let me warn you that's a campaign year . . . and we intend to enforce these rules."

Among the actions which, under the new Hatch Act ruling, would mean ousting a civil service employe from his job are:

Activity at primary or local elections—soliciting votes, helping voters mark ballots, helping to get the voters out to the polls, counting votes, or anything else except actually casting a ballot.

Writing any article or letter for or against a political party, a candidate, or political measure

Betting Forbidden

Betting on the results of priaries or elections.

Taking part in a political parade, either as a marcher or a musician.

Distributing campaign literature, badges or buttons, assuming political leadership, or becoming "prominently identified" with any political movement, party, or faction.

The same rules say that an employe under the civil service safely may:

Make political contributions to any committee or persons, but cannot collect, receive, or otherwise handle the contributions.

Express his opinion on all political subjects, but it must be done in private.

Mayo Pleads Guilty Of Shooting Girl

New York, Sept. 18.—The trial of John Mayo, 26, Washington newspaper artists, charged with assault for the shooting of Miss Laurabella Andrews, 21, waitress at the World's Fair, ended abruptly today when Mayo pleaded guilty.

Judge Franklin Taylor, of Brooklyn, remanded Mayo to Bellevue Hospital for observation. "I think," he said to Mayo, "they will find at the hospital that you are insanely jealous."

Miss Andrews, who is in Long Island College Hospital, was shot in the apartment of Mayo's wife, Mrs. John Mayo, in Brooklyn, on June 6. Mayo had come to New York to effect a reconciliation with his wife.

C. T. Matthews, manager of club service, presided at the luncheon.

Basque Girl Here to Dance in New World To Help Exiled Countrymen in Old

Has Written Book Describing Misery Of Her People

A 23-year-old Basque girl renewed her allegiance yesterday in a Washington hotel room to the flag of her native land, suppressed by the Spanish civil war.

Black-haired Mirim Isasi pointed mutely to the bright banner. Then she brought from a suitcase a series of objects that symbolize her work to evacuate fellow countrymen who are refugees in Nazi-held France—her latest book, a pair of castanets, her native dancing shoes.

Born in Bilbao, in the rugged Basque country, Senorita Isasi was educated in England, but returned after seven years to find the nationality of her people slowly being exterminated.

So rigid was the regimentation of the Basques by the government that came to power after Alfonso's abdication that the girl had to fight for permission to embark on a unique project involving research into the Basque language, whose origin has always been a mystery.

Her explorations of a series of caves near Bilbao on whose walls were carved ancient hieroglyphics which she was able to interpret as Basque, precipitated extensive research there by Cambridge University archeologists. Her experiences are told in her autobiography, "Basque Girl," whose proceeds go to the support of Basque refugees.

The young author traced briefly the story of hardship the last decade has brought her people. The suppression of their language—Euzkera—in March, 1936, the bitter fighting against the overwhelming odds of Franco's legions and those of Mussolini; the flight, finally, of the Basques to France.

Seeking funds for her exiled fellow-countrymen, Senorita Isasi tours the country, placing her book in department and book stores, dancing with her castanets and lecturing.

In her talks she tells of the suffering of Basques in concentration camps in France and those who have been able to flee Europe to such countries as admit them. Her own flight took her to Mexico. From there she moved to the United States to commence her patriotic mission. To save precious funds for the refugees, she travels by bus. The one she will board tonight will take her to Jacksonville, Fla., then through Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma to California. In all of those places she will lecture and dance. Then she will head for Idaho and Nevada, where she has been told there are Basques.

Dogs at District Pound Are Found Free of Rabies

Dr. Harry V. Neale, health department veterinarian, yesterday reported he could find no trace of rabies among dogs at the D. C. Pound, or among dogs exposed to the little white spitz which left the pound for a trip to Maine, and died there of the disease.

As a result, although Dr. Neale's investigation is not completed, Poundmaster Frank B. Marks' dogs will survive a health department recommendation the dogs be destroyed. The spitz was bought on September 3, and Dr. Neale has attempted to locate dogs which might have come in contact with the spitz and later sold to the public. Dr. Neale said most of the dogs which were in the pound that day already have been destroyed.

Red Cross Fete Set Sunday At Watergate

200 Church Choristers To Salute Opening Of Annual Roll Call

"Red Cross Sunday" will be observed at the Watergate Sunday afternoon at 4:30 when 200 choristers from five Washington churches will offer a musical tribute. The celebration will be broadcast by WRC.

The program will serve as a salute to the Red Cross annual Roll Call, which will officially open at noon Monday with flag-raising ceremonies in front of the District Building.

Plans for both affairs were announced yesterday at a luncheon in the Raleigh Hotel. Speakers included Courtland D. Ferguson, Roll Call publicity chairman; Edgar Morris, Roll Call chairman, and Brig. Gen. Frank R. Keefer, District Red Cross chapter chairman.

The following committee chairmen also were announced: Kirk Miller, newspaper; Dewitt McGraw, radio; Walker D. Howard, flags and decorations; A. Leftwich Sinclair, jr., window displays; Carter T. Barron, theaters; John E. Shoemaker, outdoor publicity; Carl Claudy, jr., direct mail publicity.

The significance of the Red Cross Roll Call was described to employes of the National Savings & Trust Co. at a special meeting at that institution yesterday. Walter L. Davidson, assistant manager, Eastern area of American Red Cross, was the speaker.

A further appeal for blood donors was issued by Otto S. Lund, District Red Cross Chapter manager, who announced that only 26 donors have registered of the 100 required. The Red Cross is cooperating with the United States Naval Medical School in registering donors. Accepted donors will be requested to give one pint of blood. This is part of the national defense program, and donors will be referred to the Naval Medical School. The plasma will be used in emergency cases.

After registering with the Red Cross, 1730 E street, the donor will be advised when to report for examination. Registration may be made in person or by telephone, National 5400, Branch 44.

Hoover Sees Dictator if U. S. Joins in War

Entry Would Destroy Hope of Free Economy For Generation, He Says

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—Former President Hoover declared tonight that entrance of the United States into the European war would put this Nation under a "totalitarian dictatorship" and destroy any hope of "maintained free economy in the world for a generation."

After any "so-called peace," he said in an address prepared for an economic symposium at the University of Pennsylvania's bicentennial celebration, "the idea of the free states combining against the totalitarian nations in trade is nonsense. The world has to live."

Hoover predicted the British empire eventually will triumph "in its heroic defense" and asserted that it is time the United States begins to think about "economic defenses" against what is to come after the conflict ends.

Calls Speech Non-Political

His speech, which he termed non-political "despite the intellectual climate of a national campaign," was broadcast.

Declaring that "we cannot refuse to consider economic defense weapons any more than we can refuse to consider building airplanes," Hoover suggested these economic measures:

1. Increased "industrial efficiency," based on scientific research which would discover "new articles and services."

2. Self-containment: "We may be forced either by economics or military necessities to free ourselves from dependence on oversea supplies."

3. Imposition of foreign trade quotas. "The quota is far more ironclad than tariffs, and the reciprocal quotas more potent than reciprocal tariffs against the economic dive-bombers of the new era."

Disarmament "Most Unlikely"

"Certainly if the United States joined in this war we would inevitably become a totalitarian dictatorship ourselves and any hope of maintained free economy in the world would be gone for a generation," Hoover said.

The initial form of any peace to come, he added, would be "merely a suspension of mass killing," with disarmament as the "most unlikely of all outcomes."

He pictured a period of devaluation, inflation or repudiation in some form following this peace; also "for a long time to come, the function of gold in settlement of international balances will be greatly limited."

Increased industrial efficiency would be the nation's primary bulwark against "grave economic dangers" in the future. This would include "constructive tax systems and removal of unnecessary governmental restrictions which lessen or destroy the initiative of men."

Ruth Jones' Funeral Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral rites for Miss Ruth Eleanor Jones, society editor of the Times-Herald, who died Tuesday in a Cleveland hospital, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

The body, accompanied by members of her family, will arrive here today.

Scores of friends—newspapermen, Government officials and the socially prominent—sent expressions of sympathy to her residence, 1245 Twenty-ninth street northwest. Representative was that of Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, which read:

"I am deeply grieved at the passing of Ruth Eleanor Jones, whose warm personality and lovable character won for her a host of friends everywhere. She exemplified the finest traditions of her chosen profession. I mourn the loss of an able and conscientious journalist and a loyal friend."

Profits Tax To Pass Today, Says Barkley

Senate Reaches Agreement for Vote On Brown Amendment

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Senate passage today of the excess profits tax bill was predicted by Majority Leader Barkley last night after an agreement had been reached to vote this afternoon on the Brown amendment allowing Federal taxation of State securities.

With only a handful of Senators on the floor, almost the entire afternoon was taken up with debate over the Brown proposal, which would allow the Federal Government to tax income derived from Federal, State and local securities and would also permit the States to tax income from Federal securities.

Although a plank in the 1940 Democratic platform favors the proposal, Senator Barkley said he disapproved of the Brown amendment. He subsequently pointed out that he felt it had no place in the present tax bill and that, in any case, it had not been considered by any regular standing committee of the Senate.

Agrees to Vote

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, sponsor of the amendment, was chairman of a special committee appointed last year to study the problem.

The Senate agreed to vote not later than 4 p. m. today on the Brown amendment. A proposal of Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, for a high wartime-profits tax will then be discussed, but little debate on this amendment was expected.

Asserting that present tax exemptions on governmental securities comprise an "unjust legal escape" for wealthy investors, Senator Brown declared that "our taxation falls heavier on the poor man and lighter on the rich man."

"Too much capital is in tax exempt Government bonds and not enough in private industry," said Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

Heading the attack on the proposal, Assistant Minority Leader Austin asserted it was unconstitutional and would open the door "to complete control of every municipality in the country by the Federal Government."

"If this goes through, then you will increase taxes on every foot of land and every parcel of personal property in the United States," added Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

George Optimistic

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, told his colleagues that "the excessive spending due to the national defense program should be the means of restoring prosperity in this country."

It was said by some observers yesterday that no matter what type of tax bill emerges from the Senate-House conference, an entirely new one will have to be written next session anyway.

Meanwhile, Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, introduced a resolution yesterday for the appointment of a special committee of three Senators to investigate the financial situation of the Government and to formulate a plan "for an automatically balanced budget in time of peace."

President Returns To Finish Speech For Philadelphia

By the United Press

President Roosevelt returned to the Capital yesterday to check on progress of the defense drive and to complete work on an address to be delivered at Philadelphia tomorrow afternoon which apparently will be the second major speech of his campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt had attended funeral services at Jasper, Ala., for Speaker William B. Bankhead.

Particular significance is attached to tomorrow's address because of the presence on the Presidential special of Judge Samuel Rosenman, of New York, one of Mr. Roosevelt's intimate advisers of long standing, who has aided in preparing many of his most important speeches.

Mr. Roosevelt's tentative plans tomorrow call for a morning inspection of the Philadelphia Navy Yard and of the New York Shipbuilding Co.'s yards at nearby Camden, N. J.

His address is scheduled to be delivered at the University of Pennsylvania after he receives an honorary degree.

First Lady Plans Tour of Country To Visit Her Far-Flung Family

A swing across the country—not as a campaigning First Lady but merely as a mother visiting her children—is on Mrs. Roosevelt's pre-election calendar.

Yesterday, at her first press conference at the White House since June, she said she did not expect to be in Washington very much until late autumn. She will spend most of next month traveling across the country and back again to see her four sons and her daughter.

"Are you going to inspect them?" Mrs. Roosevelt was asked. Above the ripple of laughter that ensued, the First Lady laugingly replied that she was.

Discussion Ranges Far

Preservation of civil liberties, selective service for women as well as men, patriotism, and the First Lady's new autumn wardrobe, were touched on briefly during the remainder of the conference.

The right to think and speak freely can be preserved if every American is determined "to develop activity in citizenship," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "What we lose, we lose because we are too slow to safeguard our rights," she went on.

Discussing selective service, the First Lady said she would like to see it extended to take in women as well as men; but she emphasized that she did not mean that military training would be required of women. She said further that married men like her own sons, "whose families would not starve" would be the first to be conscripted when married men were taken into service under the compulsory military training bill.

Patriotism she defind as much more than a matter of waving flags and saluting them. Patriotism in a democracy is a way of living, she stated.

To most questions Mrs. Roosevelt answered "no comment." She did say, however, that the autumn wardrobe she recently purchased in New York did not include "campaign clothes." That label, she added, was "just nice newspaper talk."

Mrs. Roosevelt came to town to attend a meeting of some recreational groups at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday morning. She did not plan to make a talk.

No political speeches of any type are on her schedule, she said. The only lecture she will give before election will be at Colby College, Waterville, Me., on October 30. "It will not be political," she reiterated.

Present at the conference was Miss Charl Ormond Williams, of the National Education Association, who came to show the First Lady a silver tray on which she has had engraved a letter to her from the President. Miss Williams was the first woman vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee. She was appointed in 1920.

Sees Benefits in Draft

New York, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight that the selective draft program would develop in American youth a love for democracy by making them understand "that they are essential to the building of a democracy."

This, she said, would give the United States an effective weapon against forces which have fired the imagination of other young people "with a belief that they are essential because they are cheating a powerful State, one which will bring work and food and shelter and some measure of contentment to all the members of their 'chosen race.'"

"We should register everyone so that they will all have a feeling of obligation," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "Then in the various communities it should be left to a carefully chosen board to decide which people can best serve in different capacities. . . .

"If it were left to the volunteers, some would volunteer for military service who would undoubtedly be better suited for something quite different."

Flynn Says Willkie Is 'Emotionally Unfit'

New York, Sept. 18 (INS).—National Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn declared today that Wendell Willkie is emotionally unfit to be President during a crisis.

Flynn said:

"If by any chance Mr. Willkie were elected President, he's so emotionally unstable that the head of some foreign State might say something Mr. Willkie didn't like and Mr. Willkie would declare war half an hour later, and that without consulting anybody. Then after declaring war, half an hour later he would withdraw his declaration of war."

All Draftees May Get Medical Aid

State Health Chiefs Would Recondition Even Deferred Men

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The Nation's State health officers, acting in concert, have recommended the adoption of a medical preparedness program which would give the U. S. Public Health Service unprecedented power, Surgeon General Thomas Parran revealed yesterday.

Closing a special three-day emergency session yesterday of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officers, called by him, Dr Parran announced that the organization had approved the following measures:

Treatment, at Federal expense, of men called up by draft board but placed on the deferred list because of "correctable physical defects"—such as varicose veins, hernia, infected tonsils, and eye afflictions of a minor nature.

Mass blood tests of all registrants to ferret out unsuspected cases of syphilis.

Greatly increased authority and funds for the Public Health Service to attack sanitation and public health needs in the various States for protection of the civilian population against possible epidemics.

Assignment of a P. H. S. doctor as medical adviser to the National Youth Administration and the establishment of a systematic program, under auspices of the Federal Health Bureau, to provide NYA enrollees with medical and dental care.

Controversy Raised

Probably the only controversial feature of the broad program is the recommendation that the Federal Government undertake to bear the cost of treating potential draftees for "physical defects or ailments which are readily amenable to treatment and cure."

Such a policy, it is held, would be a concrete demonstration of socialized, or state, medicine, a type of practice which is being fiercely resisted by the American Medical Association.

Dr. Parran, who gave his personal indorsement to this plan for rehabilitating men suffering from minor disabilities, said he will go to Chicago tomorrow to explain the proposal to the American Medical Association's special committee on medical preparedness.

Representatives of the A. M. A., as well as of the American Dental Association, American Public Health Association, National Tuberculosis Association and kindred groups, attended the health officers' meeting, but their reactions to the plan were not learned as all sessions were strictly closed to all but delegates and selected guests.

George St. J. Perrott, Public Health Service statistician, estimated that the "correctable defect" treatment scheme, if adopted, would cost approximately $25,000,000, Dr. Parran divulged.

Sees Aid to Industry

Perrott, who placed the topic before the conference for discussion and action, argued that the plan would not only increase the number of conscripts available for military service but, by making men fit to work as well as fight, perform the same service for essential industries.

Incidentally, the chairman of the committee which drew up the resolution urging the Federal medical care system was Dr. E. S. Godfrey, who succeeded Dr. Parran as New York State Health Commissioner.

The surgeon general said the conference went on record in favor of free blood tests for all 16,500,000 registrants October 16 but, recognizing that time is too short to prepare for such a gigantic task, recommended that all State and local public health agencies do all they can to encourage young men in their communities to take the anti-syphilis examination in the next few weeks.

Projecting syphilis prevalence figures upon the 16,500,000 men between the ages of 21 and 35 who will register next month, it is estimated that there will be 300,000 cases of the disease in this group, Dr. Parran pointed out. Many, if not most, of these are unknown to the sufferers or, if recognized, are not being treated properly, he added.

Another phase of the national defense program on which the assembled health officers took action was the physical welfare of NYA enrollees. After Aubrey Williams, NYA administrator, cited the advantages of conserving the health of youths who are being aided under the vocational training program, the conference recommended that the Public Health Service initiate a medical-dental care project in their ranks.

Explaining that he will submit this and the other proposals of the public health conference to his superior, FSA Administrator Paul V. McNutt, Dr. Parran said their expense may be borne—provided approval is forthcoming through an allotment from the $200,000,000 national defense contingent fund administered by President Roosevelt.

Although the Surgeon General expressed satisfaction with results of the special conference, which opened here Monday morning and closed yesterday, he nevertheless deprecated the lack of a medical coordinator in the defense program to expedite and harmonize all activities of a public health and medical nature, civilian and military.

Stars of Opera, Stage, Screen Offer to Entertain Draftees

Lily Pons, Tibbett Head List of Volunteers; Army Fears Overdose of Recreation Might Interfere With Intensive Training

By the Associated Press

Lily Pons, Lawrence Tibbett and many other stars of the opera, stage and screen have volunteered to entertain soldiers of the expanding army, but the War Department has not yet decided whether to make use of their talents.

Officials said yesterday they were proceeding cautiously in arranging recreation for conscript units and the increasing numbers of Regulars and National Guardsmen.

Col. Henry H. Pfeil, in charge of a new morale division of the adjutant general's department, said plans were complete for service clubs at the principal posts with hostesses in charge, for motion picture shows, and for athletics.

"Recreation Incidental"

"The Army's prime purpose just now is to train soldiers, and recreation will be incidental," Col. Pfeil said. "The selective service trainees will be in the Army only a year and they must undergo intensive training.

"They could receive an overdose of recreation. In the World War many men got too much chocolate and too many cigarets."

A request for $2,500,000 for recreational activities was included in estimates which President Roosevelt sent to Congress this week.

The Army has ten hostesses for existing service clubs and contemplates adding several score others, Col. Pfeil said. Many applications already have been received. Plans call for three hostesses and a librarian at each of the 30 or more service clubs to be organized at principal posts.

Army to Direct Program

Under a policy already in effect, the Army itself will direct recreation, instead of such agencies as the Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus and Salvation Army. The buildings of such private agencies will be outside military reservations, except in the case of a few Y. M. C. A. headquarters already on Army posts.

The Y. M. C. A. operated the "Liberty Huts" of the World War, in which such entertainers as Elsie Janis sang.

Motion picture theaters for soldiers already are operated at about 100 posts and probably 50 others will be provided. Men in uniform pay an average of 14 cents admission.

The service clubs contemplated for each of 30 or more division headquarters will include assembly halls for dances and entertainment, cafeterias and possibly guest houses for visitors, with three hostesses and a librarian attached to each center.

Guard Officers Await Orders On D. C. Draft

Board Authorizes Use of Entire Force Of 3,175 Teachers

Four District National Guard officers last night awaited orders from the War Department calling them to active duty to supervise establishment and operation of Washington's conscription machinery.

A fifth, Maj. James R. Lusby, disbursing officer of the District government, already has been detailed to active duty and will serve the draft organization as disbursing officer.

While the names of other officers were not available from the War Department, Guard commanders are known to have requested assignment of these men with strong likelihood that recommendations will be followed:

Maj. Hugh Everett, jr., structural engineer with the Southern Railroad and plans and training officer of the Guard, to be chief of the District's registration and classification division.

Welsh May Head Inspection

Maj. Walter Welsh, employed in the office of the general counsel of the Veteran's Administration and judge advocate of the State Guard staff, to have charge of the inspection division.

Capt Gordon Hittenmark, radio commentator and a member of the adjutant general's staff, to be public relations officer.

Second Lieut. Albert L. Cox, jr., who is in the investment banking business and the son of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, to be chief of the mobilization division.

In anticipation of the draft, all the officers have been in training for their tasks for the last year.

The city's conscription machinery can be set up by the middle of next week if the War Department makes up its mind within 48 hours on final details of instructions to local draft executives.

3 or 4 Days for Organization

Gen. Cox, the District's selective service executive, said yesterday it would require only "three or four" days to complete a draft organization here, subect to Federal approval, once regulations are issued.

Officials of the selective service committee said yesterday they hoped to have some regulations ready for President Roosevelt's approval today when he is scheduled to sign executive orders establishing a National Selective Service Administration.

Col. David McCoach, jr., District Engineer Commissioner, announced that a list of prominent Washington residents, approved by the Commissioners as members of the local draft boards, will be ready for submission to the White House in ten days. It was expected the list would be made public September 29.

Teachers to Assist

At the same time the Board of Education yesterday authorized use of the city's entire force of 3,175 public school teachers to handle registrations October 16. The teachers will work in two shifts of seven hours each and will be under the supervision of the school principals who will act as chief registrars.

Even with employment of every available teacher, additional registrars probably will have to be used, officials said. Paul Edwards, District WPA Administrator, yesterday wrote Gen. Cox advising of the availability of WPA workers on registration day.

Specimen registration cards and certificates, the latter to be sent to each of Washington's 98,000 draftage men, have been sent to local draft headquarters in the National Guard Armory.

Present plans call for printing of cards under contracts let to local printers by Gen. Cox. An estimated 200,000 cards would be printed here with the bill going to Uncle Sam.

Cards Resemble Those of World War

Registration cards and certificates follow closely those used in the World War draft. Final determination on the form of the questionnaire to be mailed each registrant is to be made today.

Three hundred employes have been added to the pay rolls of the Government Printing Office this month where millions of conscription record forms are being printed. About one-third of the conscription printing is to be assigned to private industry.

Gen. Cox yesterday accepted an offer of assistance from the committee on medical resources of the District Medical Society whose members are Dr. F. X. McGovern, chairman; Dr. Daniel L. Borden, society president, and Theodore Wiprud, secretary.

The services of officers and members of Argo Lodge B'nai B'rith were tendered Gen. Cox yesterday in a letter from David Wiener, recording secretary.

Montgomery Citizens to Meet

A proposal for an incinerator in the metropolitan area of Montgomery County will be discussed at a meeting of the North Woodside-Montgomery Hills Citizens Association in the Montgomery Hills Junior High School tomorrow at 8 p. m.

A demonstration on how to operate a voting machine also will be given at the meeting, George E. Bond, president, announced.

U. S. Agents, Police Prepare To Check on 'Draft Dodgers'

Officials to Rely on Patriotism But May Demand Birth Certificates Of Those on Age Borderline

You had better have your birth certificate handy if you are past 35 but look younger, when national registration day comes around on October 16. Otherwise someone may report you to the authorities.

While details of enforcement of the 1940 registration have not been divulged, it is expected that, as in 1917-18, officials in charge of the draft will rely principally on patriotism and publicity, and act only on complaints of evasion.

The Justice Department, with aid of local police, doubtless will check up on your age if someone writes in that actually you are 34 though you pretend to be 38.

A report of the provost marshal general to the Secretary of War during the World War classified those who sought to escape military service illegally in three classes—"slackers," those who failed to register; "delinquents," those who failed to return questionnaire for classification, and "deserters," those who registered but failed to report for military duty.

More than 10,000 prosecutions for failure to register were instituted by the Justice Department by June 30, 1918, but the policy was to prosecute only when failure to register appeared to be willful. Up to that date the Bureau of Investigation had made 220,747 investigations of failure to register and delinquency. Of those investigated 23,495 were inducted into military service.

"Many of the persons whose cases have been investigated for failure to register," the report stated, "have asserted that they were not within registration age.

"Effective investigation of such assertions was made by examination of public school records, life insurance records, birth and marriage records, immigration records, records of qualified voters, and records under the liquor laws of certain States, which require affidavits of the person obtaining intoxicants . . . that he has attained his twenty-first birthday.

"Thousands of letters have been received by the various authorities, reporting alleged instances of failure to register, of false statements submitted on questionnaires, and of failure to perform other duties under the selective service law."

"Slacker raids" were organized by Justice Department agents in some cities, the report states. In the mountains of western North Carolina some of the boys hid in the forests and caves, only to be captured by special agents of the Justice Department.

Tin Discovered In Gold Mine In Nevada

Reno, Nev., Sept. 18 (AP).—The Reno Evening Gazette said today that tin—a metal for which the United States is entirely dependent on foreign production—had been discovered in the Jumbo Extension Gold Mine at Goldfield, Nev.

The paper said geologists noted a similarity in the geological formations of the mine with those of the Cornwall deposits of Bolivia.

Geologists said they believed a commercial body of the tin ore might be proven by drilling through 300-foot shale beds to the granite contact which underlies the Jumbo Extension at 1,300 feet.

Government engineers will examine the mine for the strategic metals division of the United States Bureau of Mines.

Drifting British Barrage Balloons Give Nazis, Finns Target Practice

Briton Finds Answer: Bomb U-Boat Base At Berchtesgaden!

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 18 (AP).—German fliers reported they found some tame targets for their guns today—British barrage balloons torn loose from their moorings by the gales which swept England's coast yesterday and drifted over to the continent.

Military authorities said Nazi aviators shot down 120 by nightfall.

Stockholm, Sept. 18 (AP).—Barrage balloons on the loose from England swung over Finland today and the wind probably will carry some of them to Russia.

One over Helsinki, Finland, was shot down by antiaircraft guns, bursting into flames and dropping in the harbor without damage. At least 80, probably more, cut across Sweden.

London, Sept. 18.—Since the Germans started spraying bombs all over this town Londoners have been writing to editors demanding that Britain start bombing German civilians forthwith.

This view of course immediately aroused another battery of letter writers who maintained that such a policy would only alienate world opinion and make a mockery out of Britain's war aims. The controversy seemed to be getting nowhere until today when a gentleman named C. Paley Scott wrote a letter to the Times.

"Sir:" said Scott, "we all agree that only military objectives should be attacked, but now that Germany has attacked the oil tanks near Buckingham Palace isn't it about time we bombed the submarine base at Berchtesgaden?"

London, Sept. 18.—Prime Minister Churchill recently issued a curt order to all government departments to cut out all official double talk and draft their memos in brisk direct English.

One department, which evidently had read the premiers' order, today displayed a newly painted sign. It read:

"In event of an air raid warning being sounded all members of the staff should proceed to the shelter with all celerity compatible with safety."

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—A British pilot who bombed Boulogne last night dove to 200 feet to make sure he had done his work well, air ministry sources said tonight.

His London home had been demolished a few nights before by German bombers.

London, Sept. 18.—On the notice board of a London golf club today appeared the following communication:

"Will members please pick up any shrapnel on the course. It might damage the mowing machinery."

London, Sept. 18 (AP).—Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair announced today that Col. Charles Sweeney, American veteran of the World War Lafayette Escadrille, was organizing an "Eagle Squadron" which will be composed of American fliers who volunteer to fight for Britain.

The squadron, the minister told a luncheon gathering, will be similar to the Lafayette Escadrille which Sweeney helped to organize during the World War when numerous Americans went to the aid of the Allies before United States participation in the conflict.

London, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The 1,520-ton submarine Narwhal is long overdue and "must be considered lost" along with her crew of about 55 officers and men, the admiralty announced tonight.

The Narwhal was the seventeenth British submarine destroyed since start of the war.

Vichy, France, Sept. 18 (AP).—New stamps and new 5-franc coins (10 cents) coins bearing the likeness of Premiere Marshal Petain are to be issued, the ministry of finance announced today. Present coins and most stamps bear the head or figure of "La Belle France."

London, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The heads of the Soviet trade delegation now here, Paul Filin and Nicolai Feonoff, recently were caught in central London during an air raid and hurried from their automobile into the nearest doorway.

After a few minutes they discovered they were in the Polish Embassy and left quickly, recalling that Poland officially is at war with Russia.

New York, Sept. 18.—By 1941 Australia will be in a position to provide between 1,000 and 2,000 air pilots a month as its contribution to the war, Richard Gardiner Casey, Australian Minister to the United States, predicted today.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 19.—Over 200 tanks purchased in the United States will be available for training for Canada's armored brigade immediately, Defense Minister J. L. Ralston announced today.

Lands A Right

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 Polly Wright, attractive 26-year-old secretary to a socially prominent physician, used a "right hook that Tommy Loughran taught me" to beat off an attack by two men who stole into the physician's home.

The detectives said Miss Wright gave this account:

With a knife at her throat she was forced into a corner of the room and pushed to her knees by one man who ordered her to disrobe. As he ripped the belt from her dress she swung a punch that staggered her assailant.

"It was a right hook that Tommy Loughran taught me one time in a playful mood," she said. "It almost floored him and gave me a chance to run into the lighted hallway and up the stairs. When I got upstairs I called the police on the extension phone."

The two men escaped before police arrived.

The Political Arena

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Envoy to Norway, To Campaign in Middle West for Roosevelt

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, announced today she would campaign for President Roosevelt adding:

Mrs. Harriman

"He stands head and shoulders above all others as the logical leader. The consensus in Europe is that it is inconceivable that the United States should change its national leader at this critical time in history."

Mrs. Harriman said she probably would make a speaking tour of the Middle West between October 7 and 17.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Sept. 18 (AP).—Joseph L. Dailey, prominent Albuquerque Democratic leader, said today he would support Republican Wendell L. Willkie for the Presidency.

Dailey has been known as a New Deal supporter and for more than a year served with the Rural Resettlement Administration under Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell in Washington.

He said he has been a friend of Willkie for 30 years, and went through college and the war with him.

After Willkie's return from the World War, Dailey's father, Frank C. Dailey, of Indianapolis, procured Willkie his first job in the legal department of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

"My knowledge of Wendell Willkie over this long period gives me assurance that he will do exactly what he says he will do," Dailey said.

New York, Sept. 18 (INS).—Four more Democrats who are opposed to a third term for President Roosevelt today were appointed State advisory chairmen of Democrats-for-Willkie groups.

John Hemphill, Democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania in 1930, will act as advisory chairman for eastern Pennsylvania in cooperation with Vance McCormick, State-wide chairman. Pierce Butler, jr., of St. Paul, was named chairman for Minnesota; E. H. Moore, of Tulsa, chairman for Oklahoma, and John H. Sutherland, of St. Louis, for Missouri.

Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, announced yesterday that the Senate Campaign Committee was sending investigators to New Mexico as a result of complaints by supporters of Representative John J. Dempsey that "returns were manipulated" in Dempsey's election contest with Senator Dennis Chavez for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Gillette said the committee investigation would be independent of any undertaken by Department of Justice agents.

Indictment Of Daladier, Gamelin Asked

Special Prosecutor Demands Action Against Ex-French Leaders

By G. H. Archambault

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Sept. 18.—The public prosecutor specially assigned to the supreme court at Riom has presented to that body a request for the indictment of Former Premier Daladier and Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, former French commander-in-chief.

This brief announcement issued tonight from the ministry of justice marks an important step toward the eventual trial of those political and military leaders as well as their subordinates who may be considered responsible for the war and the subsequent defeat.

The prosecutor has already requested indictments in absentia against former Air Ministers Pierre Cot and Guy La Chambre. Cot is reportedly in America, and La Chambre has decided to return to France from the United States in order that a warrant for his arrest recently issued may be executed.

A dozen or more other Frenchmen of prominence are either in custody or under strict surveillance awaiting the court's findings.

Daladier and Gamelin are interned at Chazeron Castle, along with former Premiers Leon Blum and Paul Reynaud, and Georges Mandel, former minister of interior.

Before the exact nature of the charges against Daladier and Gamelin are revealed, indictments must be formally returned.

It is known, nevertheless, that these charges will be concerned, in the case of Daladier, with responsibility for declaring war as premier without consulting Parliament, and for failing to equip the army with necessary materiel when he was minister of war.

There doubtless will be other charges.

Against Gen. Gamelin the charges will assuredly concern his conduct of operations after the German invasion of the Low Countries when he engaged the bulk of his forces on a very extended front between Breda in Holland and the Swiss border with the consequence there were insufficient reserves to stem the enemy advance when they broke through on the Meuse. Another allegation against him will be that he tacitly accepted the policy of military unpreparedness.

Defense Sidelights

Coast Seeks Naval Gun Factory

Dauphin Island, Ala., Sept. 18 (AP).—Southern Governors, asserting the South as well as other sections had been deprived of "certain developments," are reiterating their requests that sites for war industries be chosen without regard to political subdivisions or community pressure."

DIXON

Closing a two-day session, the Southern Governors' Conference declared that the wishes of both President Roosevelt and the National Defense Council to establish vital war plants in secure and defensible sites throughout the Nation "are being hindered and impeded."

The Governors and about 70 representatives of the 11 States covered by the conference elected Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama as chairman to succeed Gov. E. D. Rivers of Georgia, and named Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee as vice chairman.

A suggestion by Representative Carter (Republican), of California, that a naval gun factory be established on the Pacific Coast was referred yesterday to a special board of high ranking naval officers.

Rear Admiral Alex Sharp, informing Carter of the action, said the board would study the proposal in connection with a "comprehensive study of the shore establishment necessary to support the fleet in peace and war, taking into consideration all factors which affect the situation in which we now find ourselves."

In a letter to Secretary Knox, Carter had said the Navy's only gun factory was at the Navy Yard here.

The Senate answered a tax protest from Lester P. Barlow, bomb inventor, by voting to limit to 10 per cent the Federal taxes to be imposed on a $592,719 sum recently voted him by Congress.

Barlow, after winning the half-million dollar award for infringement of his aerial bomb patents during the World War, publicly complained that Federal taxes would take 80 per cent of this.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, of the Senate Military Committee, won Senate approval of an amendment to the excess profits tax bill to limit the Federal taxes to 10 per cent on Government claims unpaid for more than 15 years, the time Barlow battled through Congress and the courts.

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Maritime circles reported today the U. S. Navy has purchased three new cargo vessels to augment its growing fleet of freight carriers, hospital and troop ships and other auxiliaries.

Officials of the Moore-McCormack Lines, Inc., confirmed reports that the Navy had negotiated for three of its ships, but withheld details. The three vessels were reported to be the Donald McKay, the Mormacyork and the Mormachawk.

'Firetrap . . .'

WHERE ONLY ONE CAN PASS—Margareta Rivera and George Herrmann illustrate narrow stairway and hall

One hundred employes of the District Unemployment Compensation Board work daily in a "firetrap" building at 470 Indiana avenue northwest, Director John A. Marshall declared yesterday.

Four stories high, without an elevator and with stairways and corridors large enough to accommodate only one person at a time, the old building at one time housed the police department. A rear addition was constructed in 1912.

Col. John W. Oehmann, director of inspection, yesterday said he would send T. F. Roche, fire escape inspector, and Deputy Fire Marshal Charles E. Achstetter to the building today to make a thorough investigation of the exits and if the situation warrants will recommend the Commissioners condemn the building, which is owned by the District.

The plaster is constantly falling, Marshall said, and "conditions generally are in a deplorable condition."

Although the compensation board operates under the District Government, administrative expenses are paid by the Social Security Board. Marshall recently asked the security board to include an item of $500,000 in its budget to provide a new building for the compensation board and the employment service offices, which are now in three different locations at an annual rent of $25,000.

The Social Security Board, although it has not officially answered Marshall's request, stated last week it could not meet the demands.

Far East in Peril, U. S. Editors Agree

Group Finds 'Plenty To Worry About' Plans of Japanese

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Sept. 18.—Only a victory for Britain or a stern policy on the part of the United States—or both—could save the Far East from new turmoil and territorial change, in the opinion of eight American newsmen who returned here today.

The group left via Pan American Airways from Los Angeles August 10, and visited New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Manila and Hongkong on a 30,000-mile tour. They came back from Hawaii on the liner Matsonia.

J. K. Walsh, editor of hte Kalamazoo (Mich.) Gazette, who represented the Associated Press, said every country was "pathetically anxious" to present its case to this Nation, and that "there is plenty of worry about what Japan is going to do. They aren't worrying much about Germany—unless Germany should get the British navy."

Walsh, as spokesman for the group, gave this word picture of major points on the trip:

Hongkong: "It probably could be taken in two months. But leading Chinese in Singapore said China would never be conquered because the war for the first time has brought national unity. And even the closing of the Burma Road failed to shake them."

Singapore: "Strongly defended, but not as much so as might be possible if England gets a good crack at the Italian navy and can spare more ships. They were tremendously encouraged in Singapore by news that Britain was to get 50 American destroyers."

New Zealand and Australia: "Both countries are making tremendous strides to become militarily self-sufficient, and still are pouring men, munitions and food supplies to the mother country. They'll be self contained in a few years at the present rate."

Dutch East Indies: "No one will take this country without a hell of a fight. They've a fine navy and air force; oil fields and all harbors are mined; bamboo spears to impale parachutists stick up at every level spot; they picked up every Nazi the day Holland was invaded."

Car Saves Briton Under Home Ruins

London, Sept. 18.—Working for 17 hours through 7 air raids, an air-raid precaution squad tonight rescued a man who was trapped inside his car under the debris of a bombed building in the west end of London.

He was taking refuge in the basement of a garage along with his wife, his 13-year-old daughter and 8 members of the auxiliary fire service who were using the garage as a fire station.

When the building collapsed all were killed except the man, named Jack Reaves.

Women Brave Bombs in Filling Men's Jobs

By W. F. Leysmith.

London, Sept. 18.—Outside one of London's subway stations, closed during night raids, a young woman in a neat tailored blue uniform of the London Transport Organization stands nightly, calmly directing would-be passengers to the nearest shelter.

"Please don't stand here," she says. "There is seating in the shelter 100 yards to the left, with every comfort and convenience."

There is no resisting the request of that girl, doing a policeman's job on a spot that might be described as "one of the bullseyes for Goering's bombers." Yet her job of 'outside marshal' in the air raids is only one of the nerve-testing tasks which London women—and they are not all young—are volunteering by the thousands to replace men called to military service.

Thousands on Job

For months now thousands of London women have been in the "front line" dressed in all the paraphernalia of war, driving ambulances and fire carts through London's worst raids and acting as shelter marshals, wardens and nurses.

Off duty they wear blue overalls and slacks and passersby see them sitting in deck chairs outside the fire and ambulance posts with steel helmets and gas masks handy, ready for the call that now so frequently comes.

The commandant and two of the headquarters staff of the Women's Legion that supplies other A. R. P. workers with hot meals from mobile canteens were killed last night during a raid.

But hundreds more have gone into the Women's Royal Naval Service Auxiliary, the Territorial Service and the Women's Auxiliary Air Force where they share the same risks on the ground as men. There are more than 3,000 women in London's Auxiliary Ambulance Service along. Now they are massing for other unusual jobs.

Filling Men's Jobs

Fifty are now working as booking clerks in London subway station as the advance guard of several hundred others. The first batch of trainees for porters' jobs appeared at subway stations today shouting, "Mind car doors, please," and pushing the last passenger inside.

These girl subway porters look smart in their trimly cut grey uniform with peaked military cap set at a saucy angle. After three months' probation they will receive a full man's wage of 55 shillings 3 pence weekly.

Numbers of women already have taken posts as conductors on London transports and "country" bus services and preparations have been made to train about 8,000 more for the metropolitan area. Applications for war jobs show that "bus conducting" is one of the most popular wartime jobs for women, despite the "difficulty of keeping your feet going around corners."

Laurel Man Killed on Gulf Fishing Vessel

Paul Hern, 35, of Laurel, Md., and Washington, was killed aboard the fishing schooner William Hays September 9, when the craft's mainsail crashed suddenly in the Gulf of Mexico, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Word of the accident, which also killed Capt. William Swim, of Pensacola, Fla., the schooner's home port, reached Galveston, Tex., when the craft was towed into port after drifting more than a week in the Gulf. Under makeshift sail, it reached a point 2 miles from the Galveston Harbor's north jetty.

Coast Guard boats and planes had searched a wide area in the Gulf since Saturday night, when a freighter radioed of the schooner's plight.

Relatives of Hern said they had received no word of his death, but knew that he was working for a Pensacola fishing company. A native of Loudoun County, Va., Hern attended school there and in Washington and for some time was employed here as a sheet metal worker.

Survivors are his father, Howard H. Hern, of Laurel, and a sister, Mrs. Mulry Thompson, of Arlington, Va. Another sister, Mrs. Marion Wallace, died suddenly in Staten Island, N. Y., last month at the age of 30.

Capt. McGuire Gets Medal Today for Saving Companion

McGUIRE

A soldier's valor in rescuing a fellow officer from a burning plane will be recognized today when Capt. George F. McGuire, of the Army Air Corps, will be presented with the Soldier's Medal in an 8 a. m. ceremony at Bolling Field.

An experimental-type plane which Capt. McGuire and other officers were testing at Wright Field, Ohio, on April 11, 1939, suddenly went out of control and caught fire when it crashed.

Dazed and badly cut, McGuire was pulled from the wreckage to safety by an uninjured officer. One of the men, however, was wedged in the rear cockpit in a semi-conscious state and unable to free himself. Disregarding his own safety and injuries, McGuire returned to the burning plane and pulled the trapped man to safety shortly before the gas tanks exploded.

Presentation of the medal will be made by Lieut Col. E. W. Hill. A review of troops will follow. The field will be open to visitors from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m. Capt. McGuire, who was born in Coffeyville, Kans., is now stationed at Bolling Field.

Toll Of Destruction

Between August 21 and September 12, 1914, the French armies attempting to stem the German tide sweeping on through Belgium lost nearly 330,000 men, killed or taken prisoner. The wounded numbered 280,000, making a staggering total of over 600,000 casualties in a period of no more than 22 days.

In comparison with World War casualties, the loss of life in the present Battle of Britain appears to be slight indeed. According to Winston Churchill, speaking in the House of Commons Tuesday, 2,000 were killed during the first half of September, with an additional 8,000 injured. Grimly enough, the casualties among members of the British fighting forces during that period numbered only 250. Hitler's war for mastery over Europe is a war whose chief victims are civilians.

To be sure, the loss of life incurred as a result of the continuous Nazi air raids on London and other British centers by no means tells the whole story. During these two weeks 2,000 buildings in London alone have been destroyed and 3,000 seriously damaged. Yet the total is small in view of the fact that the British metropolis contains within its limits more than 1,000,000 buildings of various kinds.

This does not mean that air raids on the scale carried out by the Nazis in the Battle of Britain might not have been infinitely more destructive under different circumstances. The German luftwaffe which laid waste a whole section of Rotterdam resulted in perhaps ten times more deaths than has the aerial assault on Britain during the past fortnight.

But Rotterdam was undefended. London is well defended, so well in fact, that the Germans gave up some time ago attempting to limit their attack to purely military objectives. In consequence a good part of the German effort has been wasted. It is questionable whether it has been worth the cost in planes and pilots. And it has inevitably resulted in reprisals on Berlin.

Having let slip their best chance for a successful invasion of England, having failed to gain mastery of the air over Britain, the Nazis are now resorting to tactics of attrition. They hope to wear out the nerves and fighting capacity of the enemy. But staggering as is the destruction which they have wrought on the historic British capital, they do not appear to have achieved either aim.

Super-Berthas

It has not yet been established that Nazi "super-Berthas" on the French and Belgian coasts have been hurling shells across the English Channel into London streets. But even if true, and German military spokesmen coyly refuse either to deny or to confirm the report, it would make precious little difference. The Battle of Britain will not be decided by "super-Berthas."

Theoretically there is, of course, no reason why the Germans could not lay down a barrage on the British metropolis from the French and Belgian coasts. During the World War, Paris was again and again shelled by German "big Berthas" located 75 miles from the French capital. London is only an additional 10 miles or so from the nearest points on the continent. Yet an artillery bombardment of London would be an expensive anachronism.

The bombing plane is a far more effective piece of artillery than the longest-range gun. It can lay a destructive barrage hundreds of miles from its home base. Yet the bombing of London day after day by hundreds of Nazi planes has not succeeded in forcing the British to stop fighting.

Actually the "big Berthas" of World War days did little damage at very great cost. Firing one of these guns costs $12,000 a round and required such intricate calculations that it could be discharged only once in three days. And the gun had to be rebored after firing 60 rounds.

To shell London, an even more elaborate piece of mechanism would be required than the old "big Berthas." The utter impossibility of getting the range of any target of military value would mean that the shells would have to be hurled indiscriminately in the hope that some of them would do real damage.

Some time ago the Germans might have been able to derive a certain psychological advantage from a surprise bombardment of London by long-range guns. But, in view of the punishment to which they have been subjected during the past fortnight, there is no reason to believe that Londoners would be particularly awed by being shelled.

Dispute Over Munich

Unfortunate recriminations have crept into the current debate on American foreign policy in the period preceding the present war. Both Wendell Willkie and Secretary Hull have indulged in epithets and accusations that might better have been left unsaid. Yet the present efforts to examine that policy are salutary, for they throw a good deal of light upon problems remaining to be solved.

To what extent President Roosevelt's influence was responsible for the gathering of statesmen at Munich can never be measured accurately. But it is a matter of historical fact that he urged the heads of European states to settle their differences around the council table. Even after the Hitler-Chamberlain meeting at Godesberg, at which Hitler expanded his demands upon Czecho-Slovakia, Mr. Roosevelt "earnestly" informed Hitler that "so long as negotiations continue, differences may be reconciled."

In a second note, on September 27, 1938, the President wrote, "Whatever existing differences may be and whatever their merits may be—and upon them I do not and need not undertake to pass—my appeal was solely that negotiations be continued until a peaceful settlement is found and that thereby a resort to force be avoided." Those words might readily be interpreted as an appeal for peace at any price.

It must be remembered that the President advocated "a conference of all the nations directly interested in the present controversy." He suggested that such a gathering "in some neutral spot in Europe" would give opportunity for solution of the controversy "in a spirit of justice" and fair dealing.

When the Munich conference was called, these suggestions from Washington were ignored. Yet officials here were quoted by many correspondents as believing that Hitler had acted upon Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion. Nor was the result of the Munich agreement immediately denounced in Washington. A month after Czecho-Slovakia had been carved up, President Roosevelt told reporters, in response to questions regarding the four-power conference, that the State Department and American diplomatic staffs in various world capitals had rendered a wonderful service.

About the same time, Acting Secretary of State Welles hopefully predicted, "Today perhaps more than at any time during the past two decades there is presented the opportunity for the establishment by the nations of the world of a new world order based upon justice and upon law." Intervening events have made "appeasement" a term of reproach. But in the autumn of 1938 the Administration was pleased to accept credit for having helped to avert war through the Munich accord.

The record of what happened in 1938 does not justify application of the appeasement tag to the Roosevelt Administration today. But it does suggest that the President's much-advertised foresight in dealing with world events has been grossly exaggerated. He was attempting to point the way to peace in Europe two years ago without realizing where his efforts might lead.

The most notable effect that may be expected from reexamination of the records of this period is deflation of the idea that election of Mr. Roosevelt for a third term is essential because of the international crisis. There is not a shred of support in this record for the claim that he is "indispensable."

Dangerous Issue

The automobile often has been blamed for the downfall of the younger generation by undermining national vitality, but it now seems to have graduated into national politics.

Representative Patman, in a primer written for constituents, asks himself 138 questions on the Federal Government and related subjects and then furnishes the answers.

One of his questions is, "Why are the Capitol and the White House a mile apart?" His answer is that "George Washington arranged them so" because, being familiar with the English King's control of Parliament, he wanted to make such meddling difficult for the President. So he located the Capitol on one hill and the White House on another, with a swamp between.

"This made it necessary to travel nearly 2 miles around by higher ground," the Patman primer states, "and thus made daily contact and association of the President and members of Congress quite difficult."

Answering another of his own questions, Mr. Patman admits that "streets and pavements, the telephone, and the automobile have changed all that." But with equal assurance he asserts "All of these changes, however, have not destroyed the independence of Congress." In other words, the Congress of which Mr. Patman is a member clings to its own uninfluenced judgment in spite of telephones and rapid transit between the White House and Capitol Hill.

That may be good political propaganda. But we wish Mr. Patman would leave Pennsylvania avenue out of it. Washington would be in a pretty fix if the Texan's opponent and a couple of hundred other candidates for the House should be elected, as they might well be, on a platform calling for return of the Avenue to swamp.

War In The Desert

The village of Sidi Barrani is some 60 miles from the Libyan border and about 350 miles west of the Suez Canal, the major objective of Italy's Egyptian campaign.

With the capture of Sidi Barrani, the Italians are thus still a long way from their goal, and it is certain that each mile they advance to the east will mean increasing difficulties and greater resistance. The British claim that the Italian gains thus far are of no significance, though achieved at great cost.

Italy's Egyptian campaign will be no walkover, as was her campaign in British Somaliland where the onrushing Italian legions met with practically no opposition. In Egypt the British have assembled a military and air force which, although greatly outnumbered by the enemy, is still large enough and powerful enough to give the Italians some bad moments. There is no evidence that any large part of this force has so far been engaged.

Nonetheless, the capture of Sidi Barrani proves that the invading Italian army is sufficiently mechanized to permit a rapid advance even in the face of intolerable climatic conditions. The temperature in the desert wastes along the Libyan border not infrequently reaches 120 degrees. Water is a priceless necessity. For the Italian forces to have taken Salum, Buqbuq and Sidi Barrani in three days indicates a well-organized drive is under way.

What is of at least equal importance is that the invasion of Egypt has not been followed by an Egyptian declaration of war against Italy. The Egyptians choose to regard the Italian move as only a "slight infringement" of their frontier. They are in no hurry to implement to the full their alliance with Great Britain.

From a military point of view this fact may be of no great significance. The struggle will be waged on Egyptian soil in any event. Were Egypt openly to align herself with Great Britain, however, the effect on the Mohammedan world might be considerable. For Cairo is one of the great intellectual centers of Islam, a fountainhead of Pan-Islamic sentiment. That is, no doubt, why the Italian press represents Italy's operations in Egypt as being directed solely against the British.

If Italy advances much farther, however, the Egyptian position will doubtless have to be clarified. In the meantime the British appear to be holding their fire. The Egyptian campaign, important as it undoubtedly is, is for them only a sideshow. The decisive battle is being fought in the air over England.

"Master Race"

Cables from Berlin report the widespread distribution of leaflets urging Germans never to forget that they belong to the "master race" and warning them against fraternization with Poles.

It is significant that the Goebbels propaganda machine has found it necessary to broadcast such a warning. The mere fact leaflets of this character are being distributed suggests that not all Germans are happy over their role as members of the "master race." It suggests also that the campaign of hate against the conquered Poles has not wholly succeeded. Apparently many individual Germans have ignored the promptings of the regime and continue to treat Poles as fellow human beings, deserving of sympathy rather than hate, of friendship rather than brutal treatment.

After all, it was not so very long ago that the Nazi press was extolling the Poles and denouncing the Russians as the scum of the earth. Now Hitler's subjects are being told that the Russians are all right and the Poles are untouchables. This and similar changes of attitude toward neighboring peoples must bewilder thinking Germans. Many of them must realize, too, that the Fuehrer's contempt for Poles is matched by his contempt for the masses of the German people. In "Mein Kampf" he justifies tricking and deceiving them if, in the opinion of the Fuehrer, there is any advantage in doing so.

While Nazi propaganda thus cultivates the idea of the "master race" in relation to the inferior peoples who inhabit the world outside the Third Reich, it must be dawning on the great masses of Germans that they are only a master race abroad and not at home.

It would be foolish for the Republican Party to offer, if elected, to give the people more than the Democratic Administration is giving them, but it might pick up a goodly number of votes by promising curb service and free delivery.

Against Conscription

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Saturday, September 14, 1940, marked the end of traditional American democracy. It was the period B. C.—Before Conscription. The era to follow, judging from current hysteria and Presidential policies, may be titled A. D.—After Dictatorship.

Congress has made the individual the pawn of the state, as in any other totalitarian state. Of the 16,500,000 men immediately subject to the Act, as many as 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 may know the forced servitude of conscription. The state has become, not the servant of a free people, but their master.

On this day constitutional rights of freedom of speech, press and religion were repealed to a degree unequaled in American peacetime history. Counseling someone to disobey any of the provisions of the Act or the decrees issued under its authority makes one liable to a maximum sentence of five years and $10,000 fine. Court-martial may be used on disobedient draftees.

The first victim was truth. The lie that voluntary recruiting methods had failed beclouded the truth that an unprecedented number of men were volunteering under adverse requirements. Authority will not, in all likelihood, resuscitate truth.

Religion went on a vacation. The bill's chief emergency was that it had to be passed before the churches could get into action after Labor Day. The President suavely asked for a Sunday of prayer for peace. A prayer for the flickering soul of democracy would have been more appropriate.

Grab-bag candidate Willkie, agreeing with F. D. R. and having misread a poll or two, came out for the political euphemism of "selective service." Independent voters now have the unwelcome opportunity to change to another black horse in midstream.

The reason for bothering with the general election is to select Congressmen who love America more than they hate Hitler. Only the election of independent Senators and Congressmen who will not follow prowar leaders will keep America from going over the brink.

Poverty And War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: World War II, grave and awful as it is, is merely a temporary phase. We shall have to endure it because, during the past decade no attempt has been made to destroy naziism, but rather, it seems, we have bent over backwards in voting for various forms of economic tyranny, which, in the last analysis, is precisely what naziism is. Naziism is not a cause—it is an effect. The movement and its fellow tyrannies were conceived in poverty and born of unemployment and they derive their vigor from them.

As the numbers of the unemployed (in Germany) soared so did the Nazis' vote; so did the numbers of Roehm's storm troops. The fear of want and insecurity gave Hitler and other supreme autocrats their chance to organize their peoples for the course leading to the present war. Wars never destroy poverty. They only serve to aggravate it. When the war is over we shall have a more abundant poverty, the great factor which is the mother of naziism, fascism, communism and more local "isms," and which has led us into two great wars in one generation.

It follows, then, that if we really wish to end tyranny and prevent any more wars in the future, we shall have to end poverty. There is no other way. Peace and poverty cannot long live together. Criticism without a suggested remedy is of no value. Let us then use our sacred right of franchise in electing to the highest post in the land not a politician merely but a businessman, an economist, a public-hearted citizen—Wendell Willkie.

ARGEECEE.
Washington, Sept. 16.

1917 And 1940

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1914-18 our superficial interests were involved. Some of our ships were torpedoed. Therefore, in 1917 we went to war. We sent our Navy across and by 1918 had 2,000,000 men abroad. Our efforts probably provided the extra weight which turned the tide to an Allied victory.

But never were interests more than superficial to our national welfare involved. It was exasperating to have our ships sunk. If the Germans in 1918 had won after smashing the British Fifth Army, it would have been embarrassing to us. We would have been chargined at the necessity of bringing back our expeditionary force. But that is all.

Compared to Hitler, the Kaiser was a pompous but kindly gentleman of the old school. He would have been completely satisfied with a more resplendent 1870. To strut through the halls of Versailles and demand an indemnity 20 times as big as Bismarck got were the limits of his ambition.

The idea of annihilating the independence of all other nations of Europe never occurred to him. As for the Western Hemisphere, the 1916 comic opera plot to help Mexico regain Texas was not even the beginning of a Fifth Column.

Why are we today spending $15,000,000,000 on armaments and adopting peacetime conscription? We did not do that in 1916. And surely we are not protecting ourselves against the chance of a British victory. Therefore it must be because a majority of us believe Nazi Germany many times as great a menace to our national security as the Kaiser's Germany. It must be because we believe that not our superficial but our vital interests are involved.

In 1917, when our superficial interests were involved, we sent over the Navy and the American Expeditionary Force. In 1940, when our vital interests are involved, it is a tremendous strain to trade 50 old destroyers for much more valuable naval bases. We went to war in 1917 for ideals. Our ideals got dented. Therefore we decided to have nothing more to do with war. In pursuance of that decision, we today sit idly by while the degree of our national security is being determined abroad. If Britain wins, we can go back to a one-ocean Navy and a small volunteer Army.

If Germany wins, it will cost us $100,000,000,000 in a decade for armament. But because our idealism was hurt 20 years ago, we will today hardly lift a finger to help make the decision.

It is like a tragedy in which men are persuaded to work against their own interests by the inverting of their reason. Fight when some of your ships are sunk. Sit idly by when destiny for centuries to come is at stake.

But we have grown up. We are now a practical people. We no longer think in terms of historical tragedies, even when they are our own.

Peace Movements

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much has been heard of the anti-conscription fight of the Washington Peace Mobilization, and it might well be a good organization if its program wasn't like a railroad timetable—subject to change without notice.

Their platform, when formulated, will be excellent. The reason? It will be similar to that of genuine antiwar organizations such as the Keep America Out of War Congress, the National Council for Prevention of War, the Women's International League, the War Resisters League.

But where were these Washington Peace Mobilizers during the last four years? Practically 100 per cent in the American League for Peace and Democracy (now defunct). While sincere antiwar unionists, liberals, students, church and farm youth were crusading for the Ludlow referendum on war, the Oxford pledge, the student strike against war, these former American leaguers were wrapping themselves in American flags and shouting, "We must build two ships for one." "We must rally the democracies against the fascrocracies." "We are good, good, good; they are bad, bad, bad."

Having boomed the New Deal foreign policy for four years, they have now about-faced completely. "Oh, yes," they say, "our program for keeping America out of war has changed. That is because the 'objective situation' has changed."

U. S. And Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Few souls in this blessed land can begin to comprehend the acute and inescapable agony which has, with the help of American exports of war stuff to Japan, come full upon the peace-loving hearts of China—hearts which outnumber our hearts three to one.

What can we plead at the judgment bar of history? Can we, who also fear Japan (with excellent reason) and feel it necessary to keep our fighting ships in the mid-Pacific, hope to search our souls and find any reason worth telling for sending to our potential enemy the stuff which gives her her only chance to grow into a towering menace? Without our help, Japan would find it an utter physical impossibility to maintain this hideously cruel war in China. With our help, Japan unquestionably hopes to make China a mighty hammer with which to master all Asia, shatter us "sentimental boobies," and, with Hitler, rule this earth of many peoples.

Is there sense, courage or honor in our trusting complacently to China's superb fortitude to defeat Japan at long last, as we sell Japan the stuff which makes it necessary for China, if she is to win, to suffer, and suffer, and suffer? Neither a victorious China nor a victorious Japan could love or respect us in the least for this selfish timidity

The Camps Of 1917

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much has been said and written about how soft American youth has become and how they need hardening.

Perhaps so, but not the kind of hardening which 62,000 youths got in camps in 1917, when they were hardened into cold corpses due to lack of proper housing, clothing, covering and hospitalization.

Sixty-two thousand dead in camps as against 52,000 killed or dead of wounds in battle in 1917.

Let us not make that mistake again. It is much too costly. It is useless sacrifice.

The Post Impressionist

Navy In The Woods

IT IS TRUE, though embarrassing, that once our Navy got caught in the woods and had to have the Army to save its face.

It all happened in the spring of 1863, when Admiral Porter, of the U. S. Navy, tried to put to test one of his favorite theories that he could outflank the Confederate batteries at Vicksburg by going around them, through bayous and creeks in the back country.

Having his men cut the levees and let the mighty Mississippi River tide sweep in, filling the bayous to the brim and flooding the countryside, he plunged his gunboats into the rushing stream. He was so sure of getting into Vicksburg's back door that he took four of his big ironclads and two light mortar boats, especially built for work of this type. Gen. Sherman was to march overland, keeping pace with the gunboats.

For days the gunboats steamed through thick forests and again by fields of corn or rice, with the tops of Negro cabins or the columned front of a planter's home showing in the distance.

A few days later Gen. Sherman, mounted on a gray horse, met the gunboats in a deep bend and laughingly warned Porter that before he got back there wasn't going to be a smokestack left, not a boat left at the davit.

"All I want is an engine, a gun and a hull to float them on," replied Porter.

Leaving Sherman he proceeded into a canal just 46 feet wide. The broadest gunboat was 42 feet, and to enter the stream meant that retreat was out of the question. There was 9 feet of water and the levees on each side rose higher than the boats, making the guns inefficient if they were attacked.

Farther on Porter found on the levee of the canal thousands of bales of cotton had been piled up on the sides of the stream and were blazing from a torch.

Then he began to wonder if he had made a mistake in trying to navigate the bayou. To wait for the cotton to burn might cause a serious delay. On the high bank of the canal stood an old Negro begging to be taken aboard. Porter asked him just how long it would take for the cotton to burn.

"Two days, massa," the darky responded.

That ended all doubt in Porter's mind. Ringing the bell for full speed ahead, the flotilla went plunging into the smoke and fire. It was a hot experience for the Navy. The sailors stood inside with buckets in hands waiting for an emergency, and without a man in sight the huge ironclad flotilla passed through the flames. All of a sudden there came an enormous crash. The gunboat shivered and for a moment stood still, then gathering headway moved on again through ominous grating beneath her keel. When they had passed out of the smoke and fire, all hands rushed on the deck for a breath of cool air to find that they had demolished a low, heavy bridge.

After overcoming these hardships the squadron came to a stretch of smooth water that seemed to promise good sailing. On seeing a kind of a green scum ahead which extended across the bayou from bank to bank, Porter asked the old man who had been taken aboard what it was.

"'Taint nothing but willows, sah, yo' kin go troo dem like an eel."

Satisfied with this explanation the admiral ordered full speed ahead. The foremost tug sped forward into the willows, but began to slow down after going about 30 yards, then finally stopped and was unable to go either forward or backward.

Not yet dismayed, Porter gave orders for the Cincinnati to push the flagship out. The heavy gunboat hurled itself forward and dashed into the willows, but it didn't even reach the tug. The slender willow shoots entangled the vessel and held it immovable. Using every method of getting free the sailors went to work, but the willows did not release their grip. The matter was rapidly becoming serious, for a report came that the Confederates were coming down the canal.

The enemy didn't leave Porter much in doubt as to what they intended to do, for they soon began a vigorous firing of heavy batteries on the little fleet.

After silencing the guns of the Confederates with his mortar boats, Porter exclaimed aloud that he would give $10 to anybody who would get a telegram through to Sherman. A Negro stepped out of the group that had congregated on the levee nearby and announced that he would carry a message to "Kingdom Come for a half dollar." After questioning the volunteer, Porter wrote his famous message: "Dear Sherman—Hurry up, for Heaven's sake. I never knew how helpless the Navy could be steaming around the woods."

The difficulty was growing, for the Confederates were becoming bolder in their attacks. The work of freeing the tugs wearied the sailors and left them with little spirit to meet the assaults. Then they discovered that the Confederates were hemming them in by felling trees in front and back of the flotilla, and, too, had mustered a thousand men and a few field guns for a final attack.

This went on for several days, until the Confederates, thinking that they had the gunboats at their mercy, gathered for the charge. It looked as if the fate of the gunboats was sealed, but suddenly Sherman and his troops burst out of the woods and routed the enemy.

Riding down to the edge of the bayou, Sherman shouted at Admiral Porter: "Hello, Porter, what did you get yourself in such a scrape for? You Navy fellers don't have any business running around in the woods in gunboats. But it's all right now; the Army will get you out."

In a few days the Army had the webfooted Navy back into the Mississippi safe and sound.

Today And Tomorrow

The Evolution Of The Defense Program

ALTHOUGH the full effects cannot yet be felt or measured, it is evident that the British war orders and the American defense contracts have already begun to exert an influence upon our economic life. It is reflected in the sharp increase in department store sales, which are running on the average 10 per cent above last year, in the registration of new passenger cars, in the very considerable increase of railroad freight traffic, in the heavy demand for copper, zinc, cotton and lumber, and in many other fields. The evidence shows that the vast purchases first authorized by the Allies and then later by the United States Government are no longer in the stage of paper contracts and blueprints at Washington and New York; they are beginning to make work, and to employ labor and to pay money. Yet this is obviously only the beginning of the immense effect which these enormous expenditures will produce. It is the easiest and pleasantest phase of the armament boom, easiest because for the most part it merely takes up the slack, the pleasantest because it is the phase in which we get more guns and still get more butter.

It is a phase which is bound to pass. The time must come when the defense program passes from being a gigantic pump-primer into being the main engine which must be kept going by giving it priority in raw materials, tools, and labor, by reducing through taxes and other devices, the consumption of civilian goods. Only in its earlier phases, that is, before the real expansion is under way, can the defense program be an adjunct to business as usual. When the real expansion is under way, the program is destined inevitably to be the dominating factor in all the chief markets for materials, capital and labor. As the authorized expenditures begin to be actual expenditures, as they rise from a tenth or less to a quarter or more of the national income, the really difficult problems of a defense economy will be with us.

THESE PROBLEMS are of two general kinds: One, which is the more immediate and urgent, is how to speed up national defense production as efficiently as possible; the second, which must be continually kept in mind though it is in the far distant future, is how to demobilize this defense economy if and when real peace is eventually restored. The first is the problem of how to change from a predominantly civilian to a predominantly military economy; the second is the problem of how to change back.

The first of these problems will be with us as soon as we have finished the relatively easy stage of signing contracts for warships, airplanes and all the other equipment. For then there will begin to arise the question of priority; that is to say, the question of how to make sure that the defense industries get first call upon supplies of raw materials, tools, transportation, skilled labor, managerial and technical ability and credit. The administration of priorities is the crux of the whole business, and inevitably it requires compulsion, direct or implied, since the only way to give a defense contractor priority over a competing civilian producer is by some exercise of authority. It is at this stage that the existing organization in Washington will have to be altered, the advisory commission made into an administrating authority, with a responsible head.

The present arrangement belongs to the stage of contract singing, and in this stage it has worked not at all badly. But in the next stage, which is at hand, when priorities have to be administered, the advisory commission will have to become an administrative body. For it is plain that the Army and Navy and Air Corps themselves cannot administer priorities, since what has to be determined is, among other things, how their conflicting needs are to reconciled. Mr. Willkie was, therefore, on the right track at Coffeyville, when he called for a chairman of the Defense Commission, though it is by no means clear, judging by his recent statements, whether Mr. Willkie has as yet realized that the reason for appointing "a chairman" is that it will soon be necessary to exercise authority by administering priorities among the industries of the country. For as long as the commission's work consists only in negotiating contracts, having "a chairman" or not having one will make little difference. But as soon as priorities have to be administered then a responsible head will be needed in order to insure decisions.

AS THE PROGRAM passes from the stage of paper contracts into actual production, it will absorb such a large part of the economic capacity of the country that defense will become the dominant factor in our economy. If it does not do this, the program will have been a failure. Once it begins to be the dominant factor in the sense that defense orders have priority in all the chief markets, we shall be at the stage of sacrifices. It will be necessary to tax for the purpose of reducing civilian consumption, to ration commodities of which there is an insufficient supply, to increase the hours of work when there is insufficient skilled labor, and to bring in apprentices more rapidly. No one is telling business men the truth who leaves them with the impression that "total defense" can be had by "free enterprise," and no one is telling labor the truth who leaves them with the impression that "total defense" can be had without modifying for the period of the emergency many "social gains."

The truth is that total defense means making defense the main business of the Nation. This transformation cannot and will not be effected by the ordinary civilian commercial process alone. And this brings us to the second problem, which is how such a mobilization of our resources can eventually be demobilized again.

THIS IS the problem of any post-war period, and it is the problem which Europe and America failed at incredible cost to solve 20 years ago. We must not imagine that it is an easy problem to beat swords into ploughshares when the greater part of mankind is carrying a sword or making one. So it is all very well, it is eminently right and proper, to take care in legislating for defense that all extraordinary legal powers are hedged with safeguards and that they should not be made permanent. But the problem of demobilization will not be solved by canceling the power that caused the mobilization.

Demobilization itself will have to be administered with the exercise of great powers and the expenditure of much money. If it is not, it will produce an economic catastrophe and breed a revolutionary condition. It seems to me clear that the world returned to normalcy too quickly after the last war, and it was this helter-skelter demobilization, along with a bad peace, which made reconstruction and a sound recovery impossible. The system of free enterprise, which is, I profoundly believe, alone compatible with freedom, was resumed too quickly—that is to say, before conditions were stable enough to permit free enterprise to flourish. Because it failed to do the impossible, namely, to restore a civilian economy after all the nations had been under a war economy, the capitalist system suffered a terrific loss of prestige. The leaders of capitalism were unwise. They should have known that the system of free enterprise works in a stable and peaceable world. Before they returned to free capitalism, they should have made stable the world in which it operated. Free capitalism requires order, confidence, security. Therefore, it will not work in wartime. It will not produce a great military power. It cannot demobilize a nation after a great military effort. And we do no service to the cause of free enterprise when we place upon it tasks that are beyond its powers and foreign to its virtues.

Hoodlums' Man

I WILL TELL YOU a sure way to decide whether Dan Tobin, the president of the teamster's union, is honest in his exhortation to union labor to kick out the racketeers.

Wait and see whether Mr. Tobin gets up before the National Convention of the American Federation of Labor in October to demand the expulsion of George Browne, who has been sitting with Mr. Tobin, William Green and the rest of them in the executive council of the federation. This is the cabinet and supreme court of the A. F. of L., and Browne holds a seat as representative of the racket known as the stagehands' union, which embraces all employes of the theater and movies except the performers and musicians. It is one of the most powerful unions in the United States, and it is dominated by criminals with prison records who never worked at honest employment, all under the authority of a charter issued by the American Federation of Labor.

BROWNE is a scandalous reproach to the labor movement which Mr. Tobin loves so well, and any cleanup which does not eliminate him will be a fake. The fact that he sits in the council is an indictment of Tobin, Green and the other elder statesmen of the federation who have a solemn duty to protect the rank and file from racketeers and to preserve the good name of the federation. They all know that George Browne is a hoodlums' man, but Greene, nevertheless, arose before the convention of Browne's racket in Louisville last June and indorsed his leadership.

It is necessary to recall briefly just here that Browne appointed as his personal representatives, with full powers, two notorious criminals of the Capone mob in Chicago. They are Willie Bioff, an old brothel keeper, and Nick Circella, alias Dean, a stickup man. Browne, of course, was thoroughly aware of their vicious character, having run with them for years. Nevertheless, in that same Louisville convention he made it plain that to get rid of them labor must also get rid of him.

BROWNE HIMSELF has no criminal record, but his association with gangsters has been established, and any man who knowingly selects criminals to represent an international union of the A. F. of L., with total authority to negotiate with employers and inflict arbitrary punishment on balky American citizens, is morally unfit to hold office in the federation or any of its unions. Not all gangsters have been convicted. Al Capone reigned for 10 years before he went to jail.

It is as much Dan Tobin's duty to clean out the council as it is to purge his own union. And in his speech to the teamster's convention in Washington, at which President Roosevelt also spoke as a political guest, wherein Mr. Tobin denounced "unprincipled scoundrels" in the labor movement, he put it up to himself to demand the expulsion of George Browne.

AM I CALLING George Browne an unprincipled scoundrel, then? Well, I put it this way:

Bioff, being Browne's chosen agent, clothed with Browne's powers, is equal to Browne. Bioff is an unprincipled scoundrel. Things equal to each other are equal to the same thing.

The same axiom covers the relationship between Browne and Circella. Browne is, in fact, equal to two unprincipled scoundrels.

When the A. F. of L. holds its convention the courage and honesty of those who profess to be high-minded leaders of labor may be judged by their utterances and actions regarding Mr. Browne.

Mrs. Roosevelt's New Book to Be Published Today

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Sept. 18.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is the author of "The Moral Basis of Democracy," which will be published tomorrow by Howell, Soskin & Co.

The 84-page volume contains material never before published, in which the President's wife presents her conviction that democracy and Christian morality are inseparable, and that the welfare of the democratic nation depends on the characters of the masses of the people who compose it.

Mrs. Roosevelt applies her thesis to various aspects of the present political and economic picture, saying that it is no more difficult to change human beings to fit a truly democratic way of life than to make them conform to a Nazi or Communist pattern. Citizens must decide, she said, what they are prepared to sacrifice to maintain a democratic form of government, and they will gain by doing so.

SENATOR LOGAN

He sought "to stem and if possible reverse the drift toward totalitarianism." See Mark Sullivan's article below

Unfortunate Words

By Mark Sullivan

The Issue Willkie Is Emphasizing

THE ISSUE which Mr Willkie is now emphasizing goes by two names. Both are unfortunate. "Totalitarian" is, to the man in the street—and also to some radio speakers, I observe—difficult to pronounce. It is also, to Americans, vague in its implications.

The other word, "dictator" is stale. It has been used so often that it no longer arrests attention. Also, when the word is applied to President Roosevelt it implies more than is, at the present stage, just. Those who use the word, if they are thoughtful, feel they must qualify it. They feel they must explain that in America, so far, the word means in part a tendency, a direction. It is not solely or even primarily a concrete objective consciously intended by Mr. Roosevelt. The necessity of this qualification was felt by Mr. Willkie in his Coffeyville speech. He said:

"Let me make myself clear. I say nothing about the personal motives of Mr. Roosevelt. He is a man educated and reared in American traditions. He may not want dictatorship. But in his hands our traditions are not safe. He has lost his grip on our American principles. He gives lip service to them, but he does not know how to preserve them. He has put our democratic system in danger of its life."

THAT IS FAIR. That is just. But, for the purpose of waking America up, that is tragically inadequate. The movement toward the totalitarian form of society in America, and the one-man type of Government which alone can administer totalitarian society—that movement is so strong, so insidiously expanding its area, and so certain to attain its objective unless it is arrested, that it would justify warning as shrill and urgent as the sirens which warn of air raids over London.

So much of the force of this movement lies in the sum of its parts, that merely to point out and concretely describe any one part, fails to convince. That condition, that fear of failing to convince, has discouraged many a voice which wished to cry out. To warn, but warn ineffectively—so some felt who realized the danger—would merely dull the people's ears.

Yet there was a time when the people sensed the danger, and acted. In the summer and fall of 1937 the accumulation of several steps by the Administration—including the court measure; and the tolerance, even the encouragement, of the sit-down strike; and the attempt of the President to "purge" Democratic Senators who resisted the totalitarian movement—the sum of these alarmed the voters. The primaries and elections of 1937 returned to office every Senator whom Mr. Roosevelt had attempted to ban. Those elections sent to the House an immense addition to the number of Republican and conservative Democratic members. So much so that the House which met, in January, 1938, regarded itself as having a mandate from the people to trim down the excesses of the New Deal.

THIS the House proceeded to do—in the spirit, not of destroying the New Deal, but merely checking it; in the spirit of preserving so much of the New Deal as was consistent with the principles and traditions of American government, and cutting away that part which led toward totalitarian government. Much of this was done. More was initiated. One of the most comprehensive checks was the Walter-Logan bill.

The New Deal, in its early years, when it had little restraint, had gathered to itself immense powers to harass the individual citizen. Through cunningly written statutes, not understood by the Congresses that hurriedly passed them, through broad powers exercised under those statutes by New Deal agencies, and through complacent decisions by New Deal judges who were constantly filtering into the courts—through the aggregate of these, some of the most ancient rights of the citizen had been curtailed.

To check this, to protect the citizen against arbitrary power exercised by agents of Government, to insure to every citizen the right of appeal to a judicial body—to accomplish this a measure was written by Senator Logan, of Kentucky, and Representative Walter, of Pennsylvania. Senator Logan, a Democrat loyal to the Administration, described the purpose of his measure as—

"To stem and if possible to reverse the drift . . . which, if it should succeed in any substantial degree in this country, could but result in totalitarianism."

THAT MEASURE, in April of this year, passed the House by 279 to 97, practically 3 to 1. Of the Democrats in the House, more than half voted for it. This reflected not only strong conviction on the part of the House about principles of government. It reflected also belief by the House that it was, in turn, reflecting the sentiment of the country. For at the time the House acted, practically every member was about to go before his constituents for renomination.

That was America last April—in full tide of trimming the New Deal down to the proportions of normal reforms, within the frame of the Constitution. Then, in early May, came the impact of war upon us, in the form of the German advance into France. At once our program of domestic measures was suspended. The Walter-Logan measure has never been brought up in the Senate, and is now not likely to be during the present session. Congress turned to the war, to defense measures. In enacting these, Congress necessarily gives to the President, for the purpose of defense, powers far greater than those which Congress, a few months before, felt to be too much.

Heavy Seas Still Delaying Rescue

Port Menier, Anticosti Island, Quebec, Sept. 18 (AP).—Heavy seas breaking over the grounded British freighter Incemore stopped rescue work tonight, leaving the ship's captain and 21 of her crew still marooned aboard.

During the day rescuers brought eight crew members ashore in a breeches buoy. Yesterday 15 men made their way ashore after the 4,098-ton vessel struck at the foot of towering cliffs off this island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The hold was filled with water and the ship was swept continually by waves that broke over her and the 22 men clinging to her rigging.

Turn The Crank!

THE CONSCRIPTION BILL is a law, and for the second time in a generation in a nonmilitary country millions of young men are going to find themselves in uniform yearning for the day when they can get back to a status where they can ignore sergeants.

Some 17,000,000 will register in the next few weeks for the big raffle in which many a boss will find himself taking orders from the fellow who was once his chief filing clerk. It's surprising, once a country gets onto a military basis, how many former executives start getting up at the call of a bugle blown by their office boys.

All men between 21 and 36 are subject to the new draft, and all men under 21 and over 35 think it's okay.

The bill provides for the usual exemptions for dependents, physical ailments, conscientious objectors and specified professions, and while flat feet, slow reflexes, bunions, poor hearing and bad teeth are not specifically listed, they will still stymie Old Man Mars to no small extent in his fall and winter reaching.

For the second time in 22 years local draft boards will be the biggies of the community, a number drawn from a box will mean the difference between a bungalow and an Army tent, and the Town's Most Pathetic Case will be the man who is trying to prove that, although divorced, alimony still makes her a dependent.

Most of the boys will take the draft in their stride, as they always do, and thousands will volunteer without awaiting the dice, but across the land there will be heard the old familiar cries of "I'm the main support of both sides of the family," "I know the certificate shows I'm 34, but I'm really 37," and "You'll have to speak louder, I can't hear a single thing."

The bill provides that any industry that doesn't do its duty as Washington sees it may be taken over under a rental. The theory is fine, but if the Government continues to be as suspicious and unfriendly toward business as it has been for the past few years, many a factory is going to have Uncle Sam for a landlord.

All we hope is that the politicians don't take over any important airplane plants. We'd hate to depend on an air fleet made up of planes in which a lifelong Jeffersonian Democrat had designed the motors and in which a former president of the Tenth Ward Democratic Club had superintended the attaching of both wings.

Fall in! Squads right! War is war. And peace is just as bad these days.

Books And Things

Concerning Americanization

LOUIS ADAMIC is the happiest author I know. Out of his old life sprang his books, "Laughing in the Jungle," "Native's Return," "My America." Out of his books has sprung a new life, and a magazine, launched this month, called Common Ground (published by Common Council for American Unity, 222 Fourth avenue, New York, $3 a year). And out of that magazine, and the movement behind it, will spring, if I am not grossly mistaken, dozens more books, some by Mr. Adamic, some by his contributors.

For Louis Adamic has become a movement and a crusade in "Laughing in the Jungle," back in 1932, when he told how he came to this country from Carniola, then a part of Austria, before the World War; how he joined the Army and made friends, and semi-hoboed it across the broad land, and he laughed at it all. Life was ironic, America was funny . . . He went home to his birthland in "Native's Return" (1934); it was Yugoslavia then and it was all the peasant lands of the world. It was Louis Adamic's peasant mother, and happy tears came to your eyes as you read. In Yugoslavia, because he had published books in America, Louis Adamic was a great man. There he discovered that he was more intensely American than he had ever known, and that he was a Slavic-American.

Returning, Adamic continued his explorations of "My America" (1938); he was interested in studying the origin of the American species, particularly in the divided souls of second-generation Americans. He issued a broadside, "Plymouth Rock and Ellis Island," calling for something better than a "melting pot" conception of America. Thousands of "new" and hundreds of "old" Americans wrote him letters. He had an American dream that caught fire; the foundations came to him to ask for the privilege of helping him; and now a magazine (which he will not thank me for calling Adamic's magazine) is born—with a subsidy from the Carnegie Corporation, typography designed by Elmer Adler, a cover lettered by W. A. Dwiggins, printing by the Princeton University Press, and the stamp of Adamic's vision of expanding Americanism on every page.

THE MIXED BLOODS that make America, Adamic insists, are not a handicap to defense in this crisis; this very diversity, as much as or more than our Anglo-Saxon tradition, is the basis of our strength. "Americanism," to Adamic, is not the monopoly of a race group; it is "a concentrate of the aspirations and tendencies of humanity at its best nearly everywhere at one time or another. It is a movement away from primitive racism, fear and defensive nationalism and herd instincts; a movement toward freedom, creativeness, a universal or pan-human culture."

THOSE ARE hoity-toity words, but they are true. The strength of Louis Adamic's books, however, has lain less in explicit generalizations than in his gift for picking up strange friends and telling their stories in colloquial American. This first issue of Common Ground, to my taste, contains too many high-toned articles; it lacks the stories of Steve Radins, Mrs. Tanasiches, Podgorniks and Edward Adams Cantrells which have made Adamic's books, to their readers, voyages of discovery into an unseen America about them. This is an age of biography and autobiography rather than of essays, of reporting rather than of editorials, of showmanship rather than of sermoning.

Somewhere in the Middle West, I learn from Common Ground, a school board at first refused to provide a school bus for an immigrant neighborhood beyond the tracks. "Those foreigners ought to be glad to have a school to walk to," said a member of the board, and I believe he was a more dangerous Fifth Columnist than the bundists in New Jersey . . . In Cicero, Ill., a teacher whose parents were Czech immigrants, woke up to the fact that his high school taught the children of an almost wholly immigrant community as if America had stopped its evolution in 1900. When he asked his pupils to write compositions about immigration, they went to the library; no one had ever told them that they were more interesting than the books on the shelves . . . In a Pennsylvania jail an Irish-German-American boy in his twenties, serving a 20-to-60-year sentence, began to read and then to think. "He seems to me one of the most interesting and inspiring persons I know," says Adamic. This William Reilly's story is the most interesting and inspiring piece in the first issue of Common Ground.

There is still a lot of America to be discovered.

Bygone Elections

By Paul N. Furman

Rows In First Cabinet

President Washington's first administration and one year of his second were marked by bitter rows in his Cabinet. Washington had little personal and no political sympathy with Thomas Jefferson, but he appointed him Secretary of State. Washington's intimate personal friend, Alexander Hamilton, he named Secretary of the Treasury.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON

Hamilton exerted an almost controlling influence over the President. They did not believe the people capable of self-government. Jefferson held that all power rested with the people.

Hamilton became the acknowledged leader of the Federalists. Jefferson organized and directed the opposition party, which he called Republican.

In addition to the animosity toward Hamilton, Jefferson also had a strong grievance against Adams.

Most of Hamilton's finance bills received a tie vote. Adams put them over whenever this happened by casting the deciding vote for them.

When Washington's first term was drawing to a close the Republicans would not oppose him. Jefferson and his followers centered their attacks on Adams. Some of Adams' writings were interpreted to mean that he favored a monarchy and that he regarded the Constitution as a makeshift to be discarded for "king, lords and commons."

Washington was re-elected President in 1793 by unanimous vote of the Electoral College. Adams suffered from the shots aimed at him in the campaign. He received only 77 of the 132 votes, and George Clinton, of New York, got 50. Jefferson had 4 and Aaron Burr 1.

Light Showers Are Forecast For Week-End

Umbrella weather is likely to be in the offing for this week-end, according to the Weather Bureau's bi-weekly long-range forecast.

For the North and Middle Atlantic States, which include Washington, the bureau predicted:

"Generally fair until Saturday or Saturday night, when light to moderate showers are likely."

Above-normal temperatures for the rest of the week are forecast.

Today, the bureau predicted, will be fair and slightly warmer, with a high temperature of about 84. Yesterday's maximum temperature was 81 at 3 p. m. and the lowest was 55 at 6:10 a. m.

Home of Hitler's British Girl Friend Shelters Refugees

London, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The former home of the Hon. Unity Freeman-Mitford, Adolf Hitler's idea of the perfect Aryan type of woman, was being prepared tonight to receive 100 fugitives from Hitler's bombers.

They will come tomorrow from the East End of London, the 100 made homeless by German bombs, to make a new start a beleaguered London amid the luxury typical of an aristocratic English home.

The 30-room manison in the fashionable Knightsbridge district where Miss Freeman-Mitford and her sisters lived many years, was among the first houses "requisitioned" for the benefit of victims of the aerial blitzkrieg.

Windsors Settle Down To the Simple Life

Charl Ormond Williams, Home From Bahamas, Reports Middle Age Has Tempered Royal Gayety; That Imported Hair Dresser Is a Myth

By Hope Ridings Miller.

CAFE SOCIETY is out the door for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, and night clubs hold no lure for them. The former Baltimore belle and the man who gave up a throne to marry her, have settled down to the simple life—with no regrets.

That's the report given by Miss Charl Ormond Williams, who attended Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference yesterday and told newswomen of her recent visit with the "tourists' magnets" now stationed in the Bahamas.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

"After all, we are a middle-aged couple," the Duchess told Miss Williams. "We don't go to night clubs. We live a simple life."

Obviously very much impressed with the former King and his American-born wife, Miss Williams said she was convinced both are deeply interested in raising standards of living among the less-privileged groups of the islands.

"The Duchess has artistic, creative and executive ability, and I am sure she will apply her talents to this task," Miss Williams said. She added that the Duke was equally interested in his new job, and that neither intimated a desire for transfer to a more important post.

Details of the Duchess' attire had slipped Miss Williams' memory but she did recall that the lady in question obviously "does her own hair." Perhaps, after all, it is true that the New York hair dresser recently reported to be flying to Nassau to arrange the Duchess' coiffure hasn't had a chance at it yet. Reports have made the rounds and back again that when, and if, he does, the center part will perish and those sleek temple lines will blouse out into a few softening ringlets.

SPEAKING OF HAIR-DOS reminds me—there's a local coiffeur who wishes to goodness a flock of newswomen had kept away from their typewriters one fine day last year. Their stories, he will tell you frankly, deprived him of the most famous customer he ever had—Mrs. Roosevelt.

"She didn't like the publicity," he told me one day recently, as he twirled one of my curls over a practiced comb. "Remember when she had that new coiffure and the papers said she had bobbed her hair? Well, that story spoiled everything. She had been my customer for several months, but after that, she never came back. Nice woman to work for, too."

"Is she a generous tipper?" I asked.

"Better than the average," he replied. "No matter what you've read in the papers lately about that porter incident in Ohio."

A QUIET HOME WEDDING, with no attendants and only relatives and a few intimate friends as witnesses, is being planned by Mary Dern Baxter who will become the bride of Judge Herbert Frank Goodrich next Monday afternoon. The time is 4:30 o'clock; place, the Dern home at 2118 Bancroft place.

Guests coming from out-of-town include Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kelley and Mr. and Mrs. John Dern, of Chicago; James Dern, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kalstein,, son-in-law and daughter of Judge Goodrich, and his other daughter, Miss Anne Goodrich, of Philadelphia.

Parties for Mary Baxter are adding a special fillip of interest to the social round. Among them will be the "family luncheon" to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodrich on Saturday. Then—if you would have the whole calendar—there's the Clark-Morgan luncheon tomorrow; the Marshall Diggses' cocktail party Sunday afternoon, and the Donald Richbergs' dinner Sunday night. Quite a pre-nuptial round, I'd say.

SOCIEY-GO-ROUND: Muriel Maddox, who is to mix debbing and dramatics this season, is having a final whirl in Newport before she takes off for a siege of study in New York. She and her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox, will come to Washington around Thanksgiving, if not before, and will be here a couple of weeks. Muriel's debut date, don't forget, is November 29 . . . Cutting quite a social swath in Gotham are Prince and Princess Aleksander Hohenlohe, who are making the regular rounds at night-club openings . . . When the Stork Club unlocked its doors for the season on Tuesday night, they were in a large supper party that included the United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle, jr., former Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, and Miss Beth Leary . . . The Farleys gave the party . . . Most photographed person there was Princess Hohenlohe.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark motored here from Houston to attend a family reunion party for four generations held on Tuesday evening by Mrs. Hutchinson and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Mrs. McLean Informal Host To Notables

Congress, Diplomatic Set Represented at Friendship Party

A distinguished company of legislators, journalists and diplomats gathered at "Friendship" last evening for another in the series of informal dinners which Mrs. Edward Beale McLean has been giving.

Ranking member of the group was Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, who was being congratulated on his new office as Speaker of the House. Though Congress is working overtime these days, a number of other members took time out for the dinner, among them Senator Alben Barkley, with Mrs. Barkley, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator William H. King, Representative Patrick Boland and Representative Sol Bloom, who was accompanied by Mrs. Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom.

After cocktails in the drawing room, the guests moved into the dining room, where they sat at four tables centered with standards of flowers. Later a brand new movie was shown on the sunporch.

Other members of the company included the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer.

Miss Evalyn Washington McLean, attractive daughter of the hostess, has returned from New York and was among the dinner guests last evening.

Fair Honors Mrs. Totten

Mrs. George Oakley Totten was pleased, in opening her mail yesterday, to find a notice from the New York World's Fair saying her name had been placed on a roll of fame there.

Swedish born, Mrs. Totten is a well-known artist. She has done a great deal of sculpture and has designed big panels for several postoffices, one at Newark, N. J., and another in Virginia. Fair officials have added her name to a list of foreign-born who have contributed to art in America. The names are on panels surrounding the American Common, which is on the site of the now dismantled Soviet pavilion at the Fair.

The Roll of Fame will be dedicated on Sunday at a ceremony at the Fair Grounds, but Mrs. Totten will not be present, as she has only just returned from New York, where she placed her son, George Oakley Totten 3d, in Columbia University. He will represent his mother at the dedication.

Chilean Embassy Marks Country's Independence Day

At a buffet luncheon at the Chilean Embassy yesterday, the Ambassador and Senora de Cabero and members of the staff celebrated their country's Independence Day. Members of the Chilean colony in Washington and several distinguished Chileans from New York were among the guests.

That country won its freedom from Spain in 1810. In happier times the embassy here usually has been the scene of a large reception for Capital officialdom, but this year there's a tendency among diplomats to soft pedal entertaining.

Huntingtons Return Home

Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington and their daughters, the Misses Joanna and Edith Huntington, have returned to their home on Twenty-third street after spending the summer at their country place in Clarke County, Va.

The Misses Huntington will leave on Sunday for Northampton, Mass., where they will attend Smith College. Miss Joanna Huntington will enter her junior year and her sister will be a freshman.

Miss Edith Huntington will make her bow to society during the Christmas holidays. Her sister was presented at a large tea in the spring of 1939 and was feted at a debutante tea last Christmas.

Senora de Munilla Returns to Capital

After three months in her home in Havana, Senora de Munilla, wife of the Cuban Military Attache, has returned to Washington and is at Hotel 2400.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

ONE OF THE Americans in Paris who didn't rush back to this country on the first available boat after war was declared is Mrs. Henry F. Downe. A prominent resident of the French capital for 25 years, she left it only 45 hours before the Germans arrived. Even then she went under protest. At the beginning of the war Mrs. Downe founded the Relief Coordination Service, to help both American and French, and was reluctant to abandon her work.

DUDLEY HARMON

In Washington to consult with Norman Davis and other Red Cross officials, Mrs. Downe has been staying with Gen. and Mrs. C. L. Corbin. They entertained at cocktails for her the other afternoon. The newly arrived French Ambassador, Gaston Henri-Haye, made his first appearance at a Washington party. Ambassador William C. Bullitt was also in the gathering. Other guests included Hugh Wilson, former Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. Wilson; Gen. Sherman Miles—he is chief of military intelligence—and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck of the State Department. Needless to say, the conversation centered about the international situation.

MRS. DOWNE feels strongly that Americans should send medicines and food to the unoccupied part of France. Her beautiful old home in the rue Verdi is being watched over by the American Embassy. She left Paris with only a suitcase, so a lifetime's accumulation of clothes and furniture remain there.

For the time being Mrs. Downe has an apartment in New York, but may spend the winter in Washington. She is a great friend of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and is often entertained at the White House on her visits here.

THIS WEEK the Friends of France will hold a meeting in New York to decide on future policy. Only a few months ago every third woman in Washington was either knitting or rummaging about in the attic for old clothes for this group, but now the office here has been closed. Mrs. Arthur Woods, director of the Capital Friends, will return here the end of the month from a vacation in New England.

THE PERENNIAL scramble of Capital hostesses to secure that "extra man" for dinners promises to be even grimmer this winter than usual. What with conscription and the calling out of the National Guard, some of the most sought after will be missing from the local scene.

One popular bachelor who has already been summoned for duty is Sherlock Davis. He is a member of the New York National Guard, which has been ordered by Gen. Marshall to report October 15. "Sherry" Davis will go to a camp in Alabama for a full year. He recently returned to the Capital after a brief vacation which followed the maneuvers in upper New York.

PENDLETON HOGAN, another much-invited young man, says he expects at any moment to be called up for a year's service. This will not surprise his friends, who last winter got used to seeing him dash away early from cocktail parties for his weekly drill with the Army Reserves. Mr. Hogan is for the moment very much absorbed in a new novel he is writing.

FOR EVERY MAN who leaves town, however, there will be one coming in to work at defense, so perhaps debutantes won't have to despair. At the War Department are many new arrivals, bachelors who have given up their businesses and come from all over the country to work for defense.

Four of these young bachelors have clubbed together in one small apartment, fugitives from the housing problem. Two of them sleep in a double-decker bed in the kitchen, which, in my opinion, is a pretty big sacrifice to make for one's country.

Laura Manning Is Married at Her Home In Silver Spring to F. E. Smith, Jr.

Miss Laura Manning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar T. Manning, was married yesterday afternoon at her home in Silver Spring, Md., to F. Edward Smith, jr., son of Mrs. Smith and the late Dr. Smith, of Baltimore. The Rev. Lenard Ripple, of Baltimore, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of Mandonna blue mousseline de soie, fashioned with a fitted bodice, full skirt and bell sleeves. Her small cap held in place a waist-length veil and she carried a shower bouquet of pale pink roses and valley lilies.

Miss Kitty Lee Pollard, the maid of honor, was dressed in woodrose net over taffeta, made with a bouffant skirt and topped with a tight velvet jacket. Her Juliet cap was of net and her bouquet was of Picardy gladioli and lavender and blue asters.

Dr. J. Brady Smith, of Baltimore served his brother as best man.

After the reception the young couple left on a motor trip for the West and Canada. The bride's traveling costume was a black suit of wool crepe trimmed with silver fox, and a gardenia corsage. Her accessories were black and gold.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith, both of whom are graduates of the University of Maryland, will make their home in Baltimore.

Norman Davises Give Dinner

The chairman of the American Red Cross and Mrs. Norman H. Davis entertained informally at dinner last night in honor of Mrs. W. H. MacAlister, of Winter Haven, Fla., who is visiting her brother-in-law and sister, the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and Mrs. Ewin L. Davis.

Mrs. MacAlister will return today to her home in the South.

Becomes Bride Of A. G. Newmyer, Jr., In Chinese Room

In a setting of white flowers and ferns, flanked by tall lighted tapers, Miss Alice Babette West, daughter of Mrs. Sidney West, and Arthur Grover Newmyer, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Newmyer, were married yesterday afternoon at 4:30 in the Chinese room of the Mayflower. The Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a buffet supper and reception in the east room.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Sidney West. She wore a gown of eggshell satin made with a basque waist, long fitted sleeves, a tiny collar of rose point lace and a long circular train. Her tulle veil formed a face veil in front and fell from a tiara of rose point lace. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

Mrs. David L. Weinstein was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Sally Pomerantz, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Joel Kaufmann, Mrs. David Legum, Mrs. Daniel Cohn and Mrs. Paul Wilner.

Mr. Newmyer was best man for his son, and the ushers were James M. Newmyer, brother of the bridegroom; Alvin L. Newmyer, jr., David G. Bress, all of Washington; James Weinberg, of Baltimore; Adrian C. Israel, William Dridel and William B. Heller, of New York.

The bride is a graduate of the Mont Choisi School, Lausanne, Switzerland, and George Washington University, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Mr. Newmyer was graduated from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and the Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University. He is a member of the Yale Club of New York.

After a honeymoon of two weeks in the South, the couple will live in Oak Lane, Pa.

Luncheon Honors Madeline Cotter

Mrs. Charles Daly, jr., and Mrs. Arthur Phelan were cohostesses yesterday at a luncheon at the Shoreham in honor of Miss Madeline Cotter, who is to marry John Lewis Smith, jr., October 3.

Covers were laid for 30. Among the guests were Mrs. John Lewis Smith, mother of the prospective bridegroom; Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter, mother of the bride-elect, and members of the wedding party.

C. C. Windsors At Home Here After Honeymoon

Commander and Mrs. Charles C. Windsor have returned from their wedding trip and are now established in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. Their tour took them through Canada where they visited in New Brunswick, Quebec, and Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Windsor's son, David Chew Stephenson, who is here with them, has resumed his studies at St. Albans' School.

Enrico Designs Coiffure to Suit The Personality

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

IT isn't so much the shape of your face as it is the swing to your walk, the tilt to your head or the sound of your voice which dictate your fall coiffure style. At least this is the opinion of Enrico, a well-known hair stylist who is putting his theories into practice this week at a local beauty salon.

Marshall Adams

Enrico's beauty research in his native Buenos Aires and in Rome, where he owned a shop, has given him an insight into character which has resulted in his being able to mentally create a hair style before a client ever removes her hat. According to Enrico, a woman with quick active, purposeful walk, manner and voice, is daring and willing to take a chance on original coiffures and make-up.

Coiffur For the Shy

If you're shy, retiring and unsure in your actions and speech, Enrico has classified you as the timid soul likely to want "something simple and conservative, not too conspicuous." Moderately conservative women with hidden depths of imagination will, however, be flattered over the possibility of being made anew.

A completely changed person did emerge recently in the form of Miss Earla Marshall, a young Washington business girl with a secret yen to resemble the Duchess of Windsor. Her former hair style had been just another side-parted bob. Instead of seeing a drab, listless spirit, Enrico discovered in Miss Marshall a spunky personality with a pair of nice ears and a clear, broad forehead—just waiting for a center part. He brought those features into the daylight and with them a new unashamed personality.

Duchess' Hairdo Criticized

However, only the brave should attempt the Duchess' severe hairbob, as it is too uncompromising, Enrico believes. If the wirey-haired little coiffurist had his way, the Duchess of Windsor would never again be seen in her present coiffure since it ages and hardens her features. Women of very square, strong chins and high, broad foreheads should never sacrifice beauty for chic. Rather, they should subdue these lines with a side part and a side sweep of hair to illumine, but not heighten, the forehead. On the other hand, round, flat features require height through upswept pompadours. Long necks come under Enrico's scrutiny, too. They require soft back and side curls, while short, thick-set necks need a back, side and up curve to give the effect of length.

New Hair Style Re-Makes a Personality

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Likens This Column to Lifeguard Who Lectures Drowning Man, Instead of Lending Him a Hand

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Thank you for your answer to my letter, published in your column of September 10. However, you must realize that you offered no solution. I sought advice, not a lecture—and I was already quite aware of my blundering. The viewpoint toward which I inclined (namely, that it might be unwise for a college-trained man to marry a girl whose formal education had ended with high school) unfortunately was brought on by outside influences.

Neither at the time of broaching the subject to the girl, nor when submitting the question to you, had I settled upon that viewpoint as a fixed personal policy. I believe now that it was an indefensible position, and that my "mauling of a delicate subject" was deplorable.

However, my request for help and your advice (if such it can be called), seem comparable to a situation wherein a lifeguard, on receiving a call of "help," limits his assistance to an energetic tongue-lashing of the hapless idiot for wading beyond his depth. Undoubtedly you have rendered a meritorious service to others with a "stuffed shirt" tendency (as, also, the lifeguard's scolding would warn other dub swimmers within sound of his voice), but you haven't set me back on my feet.

Fortunately, I am somewhat optimistic, in spite of your scornful attitude, in which most of your readers seem to have concurred, either silently or actively. I am hoping there may yet be a happy ending to the story. Your forecast was dismal. Nevertheless, I have always believed that if persons are sufficiently adaptive and intelligent, there is no such thing as an incurable breach of relationship—provided, of course, there is basic emotional mutuality, apart from the point of controversy.

Humility, sincerity of purpose to be and do what is right (which I venture to think I have), when combined with what I believe to be a deep affection for the young lady (even though you refuse to deem it "love" by abstract standards), may eventually point the way to a solution.

While disappointed in your reply from the utility standpoint, I consider your statements wise and correct, so far as they go, though certainly no revelation. And while I take issue with you, I am not unappreciative of your consideration of my problem. As for that omniscient "Oldster," who (in your column of September 16) charges me with lack of common sense for failing to take the next train or plane to see the girl and mend our quarrel—well, if I had the means to follow his suggestion, I would have had no need to write to you. That should be obvious. BENEDICT.

His Confusion Called Form of "Buck Passing"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It would give me considerable satisfaction if you were to re-open the question placed before you on Tuesday, September 10. That question, as I understand it, was: "Would intellectual and cultural discrepancies between man and wife inevitably provoke a breach? Or, how can this hurdle be met?"

It doesn't seem sufficient to say the young man who posed the question was guilty of a stuffed shirt's performance; of petty, condescending, crude behavior. His appeal to you surely indicates some awareness of undesirable conduct, some recognition of his inability to cut through the confusion.

If we are to be of assistance to the distressed young man, we must start by assuming he is fundamentally honest and eager to follow a correct behavior pattern. Apparently his confusion stems from the fact that throughout his entire academic training, the theory of conflicting cultural and intellectual patterns, between individuals and groups, has been over-emphasized and distorted, with the unhappy result that he finds himself intimidated by a bugaboo.

It is unfortunate that he fails to recognize there might be distinct advantages inherent in differences in viewpoint and background; differences which might bring zest, rather than conflict, to a given relationship. And this seems particularly true of himself and the girl he loves—since she has (so he says), pride, intelligence, insight, beauty, brains and breeding, as well as a loyal sense of responsibility toward her parents. One assumes that his failure to recognize the value of "difference," in this instance, is due to his fancied need to justify his choice to his family and friends.

He shows a marked tendency to rely upon the judgment of his family and friends, and therein is the crux of his difficulty, I think. Until he resolves to risk the consequences of acting on his own opinions and decisions, he will find himself continually in perplexing situations.

If he could understand this "drive for justification," he might realize he was forcing upon his family and friends the responsibility for his actions. He might see that he was trying to relieve himself of responsibility for making choices, and, also, trying to evade personal responsibility for the outcome of a given course of action.

In view of these possibilities, the man might find the happy solution of his problem, if he were to discuss it with the young lady in terms of "his difficulty," and not "her shortcomings."

TOLERANT.

Patience Needed To Carry Out Wall-Color Ideas

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Fall decorating was much simpler in the good old days when ivory walls were good enough for anybody. But not nearly so interesting as now, when wall colors include every subtle tint or hearty tone, with all the versatile gradations in between. But there is no magic wand to wave to assure you your heart's desire in wall colors. It takes pains and patience to translate an idea into an actual color. It means matching colors with fabrics, visualizing the result, following through with painters to be sure they understand your instructions.

The best short-cut for getting a good color for your walls is to see a very impressive and perfectly enormous big book put out by a manufacturer of ready-mixed paints in decorator colors. This has huge color photographs of actual rooms with walls in the various colors of paints and will give you a very definite idea of how your favorite color will really look on the wall. Among the smart and unhackneyed colors included in this line are cactus green, delft blue, thistle, cinnamon, burgundy, terra cotta, coral rose, blossom pink, laurel green, in addition to a range of clear pastels.

This big book, or rather portfolio, also illustrates in color just what gradations of tone can be achieved by mixing, giving exact proportions. Before buying ready-mixed paint, don't fail to see this book at any large paint store. It not only includes far more smart and subtle tints than have hitherto been available in ready-mixed paints, but it makes these colors so much more easily comprehended than does the usual color card, with its postage-stamp samples of color.

If you must rely on the painter to do the mixing, be prepared to stand by during the job and be firm. Otherwise you'll end up with something that's either very banal or very strange.

A WOMAN'S

WASHINGTON

The 'Book Lady' Became a Businesswoman Through Act of Friendliness Seven Years Ago

VESTA EALES, the "Book Lady" who is equally well-known for her roving library and for her weekly radio book reviews, became a businesswoman in spite of herself. "Seven years ago, when the library started, I was living in the country, beyond Silver Spring," she says. "Everyone out there liked to read, but in those days a trip downtown to the library was an all-day expedition. So I collected some books and started taking them around to the neighbors as an act of friendliness, with no idea of making it a business venture.

VESTA EALES.

"But the word spread, and at present we serve about 1,000 customers throughout Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland. There are 10 of us now, five of whom—Martha Johnson, Frances Sadd, Doris Thompson, Beth Altemus and Florence Wright—are partners with me in the firm. The territory is divided into routes, each of which we visit certain days a week. We use our own cars and stack the books on the back seat. The 'Book Lady' phrase originated with the children I dealt with who couldn't believe that Vesta Eales was a real name."

Two years ago she started a radio program, heard Saturday noon over WJSV, at the suggestion of her customers. Among literati who have discussed their books on her program are H. L. Mencken, Jonathan Daniels, Susan Ertz, Herbert Cohn ("Good Old Days") and the Hoffman twins ("We Married an Englishman").

Returning from a vacation in The Dells, Wisconsin's famed scenic spot, a local couple tells of a 350-pound Indian woman in the section whose size and dignified bearing impressed them so that they approached her and asked her name. She replied unsmilingly, "Cutie Pie."

Mrs. James G. Cumming, Red Cross ambulance driver who has been assigned to Walter Reed Hospital for five summers, has inaugurated a sightseeing program this year. Once a week she drives from 14 to 16 convalescent CCC and soldier boys to tourist attractions of their own choosing. Favorite spots are Congress when in session, the Spirit of St. Louis at the Smithsonian, and the Zoo. Every group asks to go to the reptile house, Mrs. Cumming says; she herself is not fond of snakes and prefers to wait outside in the ambulance.

People who telephone the National Defense Commission wonder if there's anything symbolic about its number—REpublic 5050.

Labor has its difficulties even in the Department of Labor, it develops. The three rival Government employe unions get along amicably enough, but the united front does not include Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor. One current cause of dissension is the right of employes to know about vacancies in the department so they can apply for better jobs. Miss Perkins is opposed to this idea: her present policy, protested by the three unions, is that notice of vacancies shall be posted only after the jobs have been filled. Friction also has arisen as the result of an order closing the cafeteria during the morning and afternoon, thus depriving workers of between meal refreshments. The employe organizations wrote Miss Perkins, pointing out that her emissaries go all over the country encouraging private industry to grant rest periods. "Where does charity begin?" they asked rhetorically.

Miss Perkins responded by appointing Assistant Secretary of Labor Charles V. McLaughlin (for many years with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen) to represent her in continuing negotiations on the two issues. He has had several conferences with U. F. W. A. leaders and an early settlement is expected.

Bleeding Heart Flower

The bleeding heart has always seemed so much a part of our old-fashioned gardens that it came as a surprise to learn that it's a fairly recent newcomer to western gardens. Less than a hundred years ago it was first brought to England from the Island of Chusan in the China Sea.

Abdominal Muscles Not Just for Looks

Exercises in Order To Keep the Internal Organs From Sagging

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU want to hold your own against middle-age, you can do it best by keeping the muscles of the abdominal wall in prime condition.

There is nothing so senescent as a flabby, rotund stomach. Not only is it the stamp of middle age, but it is a detractor from well being and actually makes you older.

This muscular girdle is not just for looks. To be sure, if it is strong, you have a lithe, streamlined figure. But most important, the vital organs are all held up in their proper places—the arrangement which permits them to function perfectly.

Exercises in Order

When these muscles lose tone the organs sag and the efficiency of the entire system is lessened. Because our mode of living tends to weaken this muscular girdle, a few daily exercises are in order for everyone. Some of the best abdominal exercises are those which are taken with the hips elevated so that gravity assists in putting the organs back in place.

Lie on the back on the floor with the feet resting on a low chair-seat. Raise the hips off the floor until the body is in a straight line with weight resting on head and shoulders. Hold for a second, then lower to floor. Repeat for six, later 12 counts.

Progress by flexing the right knee and placing the sole of the right foot against the left thigh, then as the hips are lifted off the floor, press down with the right knee. Hold, lower to floor, and perform with left knee flexed. Continue for six counts.

Wall Walk Advised

The third exercise is strenuous and should not be attempted by beginners. Or anyone with high blood pressure! It is the wall walk and it will certainly straighten you out!

Lie on the back on the floor with the buttocks against the wall, knees flexed on chest, and soles of feet flat on wall. In this starting position the small of the back is pressed against the floor, the abdominal wall retracted. Now, walk up the wall until the body is in a straight line, weight supported on the shoulders. Then slowly slide feet down wall, keeping legs straight. Try to feel each segment of your spine touch the floor until the buttocks are again on the floor with legs straight up the wall. Keep the lower abdominal muscles pulled up and in throughout the exercise. Rest for a minute and repeat. Six times in all will be plenty.

Foreign Phrases Are Taboo

SO YOU'RE learning a foreign language. Well, that was too evident at the Blank's party a few evenings ago. While you were talking to Sam you injected as many foreign phrases as possible into your monologue conversation. Now that's going too far.

In the first place, Sam doesn't know a word of Spanish or French. You knew he was not familiar with either language. Besides embarrassing him, you only impressed him as a show-off. Right there you missed your chance of acquiring a new beau. Although Sam doesn't know many foreign phrases, he's been around and he knows it is inconsiderate and bad taste to sprinkle your conversation with French phrases.

Standing near you were several persons who speak several languages fluently. Not a single one of them used a foreign phrase or sentence during the entire evening. Therefore, instead of impressing anyone with your superior knowledge, you only showed them that you're not accustomed to the society of cultured, well educated persons.

A profusion of late summer flowers decorated the house, with dahlias and gladioli predominating. The tea table in the large dining room was appointed with an Italian lace cloth, tall silver vases of gladioli and dahlias in shades of pink, the tea service at one end and the coffee urn at the other.

Gandhi Leads 'Nonviolent' Antiwar Drive

Aged Indian Leader Seeks Right to Preach Passive Resistance

By the Associated Press

Bombay, Sept 18.—Mohandas K. Gandhi, once more undisputed leader of India's main nationalist movement, has taken over the delicate task of directing nonviolent anti-war propaganda, but under a pledge that it shall not embarrass Britain.

This wisp of a man, 71 years old October 2, left for Wardha today after issuing instructions for complete discipline among his millions of followers pending an interview with the British viceroy, Lord Linlithgow.

Gandhi will seek permission to preach passive resistance to Britain and non-participation in the war.

The All-India Congress (Nationalist Party) committee pledged that organization Monday not to embarrass Britain in her struggle with Germany, but at the same time to preach against war. The committee withdrew a conditional offer of cooperation with Britain and invited Gandhi, who had disagreed with the offer, to resume the leadership "in any action that should be taken."

States Anti-War Creed

Gandhi followed up this delegation of power with an interview in the Bombay mansion of Rameshwar Das Birla, multmillionaire Indian industrialist.

"Because nonviolence is a congress creed involving congress' hostility to all war," he said, "it is a vital necessity that congress not identify itself with any war.

"Hence my desire not to embarrass Britain was necessarily limited and conditioned by the counternecessity for continued congress existence.

"Therefore I promised that civil disobedience would be definitely restricted to freedom of speech, provided it is absolutely nonviolent."

If the congress succeeds, he said, "the world can sigh with relief to find a way out of the present monstrous armament maze."

No Criticism of U. S.

Gandhi indicated he would not "be at all pleased at the prospect of Nazi victory," and added:

"What terrifies me is that, as things are presently going, defeat of Naziism must be bought at a terrific price—namely a superior Naziism or brute force, call it what you will."

Asked if his condemnation of all war implied a criticism of United States help to Britain in planes and war materials, Gandhi replied:

"Not in the slightest, for the simple reason that America doesn't agree with congress regarding nonviolent action. I wish it did. Then America's contribution to world peace and to help for Britain would be infinitely more substantial than any number of planes or any amount of material."

'Mild' Polio Case Closes Craig County Schools

New Castle, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—Schools in Craig County, excepting those in the more isolated sections of the county, have been ordered closed as a result of the reporting of a "mild" case of infantile paralysis.

Dr. W. F. Mitchell dignosed the illness of a 7-year-old New Castle boy, stricken in school last week, as a "mild" case of the disease. Officials said the schools would reopen in two weeks.

Protests Filed Over Invasion Of Luxemburg

Nazi Violations Cited In Notes Received By Diplomats Here

Protests against "arbitrary measures taken in violation of international law" by German police forces in Luxembourg were filed yesterday with the State Department and heads of all diplomatic missions here—except that of Germany—in behalf of the Grand Duchess Charlotte of the little principality, who is now in Portugal.

Copies of the protest were presented by Hugh Hughes Le Gallais, Luxembourg charge d'affaires.

Charging that the German invasion of Luxembourg on May 9, when Hitler's troops launched their drive against France by way of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, was without reason and in the face of Nazi promises to "respect the integrity and neutrality of the Grand Duchy, the Grand Duchess said in her protest:

"A few days after the invasion, Luxembourg was declared enemy country and after a short period of transition, the military administration was replaced by a German civil administration under the orders of a 'gauleiter,' who made his entry into Luxembourg City at the head of German police forces.

"In a speech at that time, he proclaimed the German character of the Luxembourg people. This was followed by an order prohibiting the use of the French language which for centuries had been the official language of the country and imposing the exclusive use of the German language.

"He abolished the constitution, released public officials from their oath of loyalty to Her Royal Highness, the Grand Duchess, and forbade the use of the terms 'grand duchy' and 'country of Luxembourg.'"

These measures not only violated international law, but treaties and promises made by Germany, Charlotte charged, declaring her people never will recognize their validity.

The Grand Duchess is expected to join her consort, Prince Felix, and their six children who are now living on Long Island. Later they are expected to take up residence in Canada.

Parachute Tests May Put Nylon Hosiery Trade in Hole

The expanding national defense program threatens to smash the chance of this country's women to reach a reputed stocking Utopia.

Housewives and stenographers, dowagers and debutantes are being thwarted in attempts to buy hosiery made from a product of coal, air and water and called nylon, partly because the material may be useful in the manufacture of parachutes.

A canvass of local department stores yesterday brought instant response: "A landslide, an avalanche of orders" they protested, "and no Nylon. What to do!"

Demand Exceeds Supply

Of five local hosiery dealers, four declared themselves sold out while the fifth had his supply replenished only a few hours earlier.

Never since the "stocking of the future" first struck the market last spring has any retailer been able to supply the demand for more than one day, it was reported.

Unhappily, a stock buyer at a large department store explained the phenomenon this way: "Women have been told these stockings are stronger, look as well or better than silk, are no higher in price. The result is we can't take care of the orders.

"That is true throughout the country. At no time has any store had enough stockings to supply the demand," she added. "The trouble is there is only one plant which make nylon stockings. Naturally the supply is limited."

Reached by telephone at Wilmington, Del., E. K. Gladding, chief of the nylon division of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., Inc., threw additional light on the tangled yarn, stocking and parachute situation.

To double the output of nylon, another plant is to be put in operation in December but it will not reach peak production for six months after that, he said.

Unfortunately for the District hosiery clients, however, the stocking trade is likely to have a powerful competitor for the product.

Five parachute manufacturers are experimenting with the yarn, which is suitable for 'chute fabric cords, Gladding declared. The Government is behind the experimentation. The object of the mills is to develop the "proper weave" and be able to turn it out on a large scale "when needed."

The synthetic yarn will not be used in parachutes until the "proper weave" has been perfected, it was explained.

But postponing the parachute threat was no appeasement for the nylon-conscious distaff side in the Capital.

"Huh," said one matron, "Draft industry? Draft nylon? Who ever heard of a run in a parachute"

Are You in Jail? Is Question To Be Asked Draft Registrants

Questionnaire to Be Sent 16,500,000 After Oct. 16 Appearance Will Determine Their Classification; Sample Queries Listed

By the Associated Press

Are you a patient of an asylum? What is your income? How is your wife's health? Are you a licensed marine pilot? Do you have a hobby? Are you in jail?

These and 100 or so other questions will be asked of the 16,500,000 men of 21 through 35 who will be required to register for military service on October 16.

Although the questionnaire has not been drafted in final form, the War Department says it will follow closely the pattern of a sample questionnaire prepared some time ago for use in case of war. The sample states flatly that the "Nation is at war and every registrant is thus put on notice to know his position and duty." Since this is to be a peacetime draft, the War Department says the "Nation-at-war" phrase will be eliminated.

Present plans call for distribution of the questionnaires soon after registration day and for their return within five days. On the basis of the replies, the local selective service boards will determine the classification of registrants. Some will be deferred and others will be marked as eligible for immediate service.

Some of the sample questions follow:

1. Have you any physical defect?
2. Are you single, married, widowed or divorced?
3. In what calling, if any, is your wife trained or skilled?
4. State your total income from all sources during the last 12 months.
5. Do you or any of your family or dependents own the house in which you live?
6. What is your usual occupation?
7. Are there any other things (including hobbies) that you do well?
8. Of what well-recognized religious sect or organization opposed to war are you a member?
9. From what port do you regularly sail (if a licensed marine pilot)?
10. Are you now authorized to preach or promulgate the doctrines of your religion? (This section applies to ministers who intend to claim deferred classification.)
11. How many years have you been engaged in agriculture (if you have) and what special training have you had?
12. Why cannot any one or more of your relatives, or some other person, continue your farm operations during your absence?

(Persons employed in agricultural pursuits may claim deferred status, but the questionnaire covering this claim must be accompanied by a supporting affidavit.)

13. To what country do you owe allegiance?

(If you are not a citizen of the United States you will be asked various other questions concerning the country in which you formerly resided, whether you have taken out first citizenship papers, whether your parents are naturalized, etc.)

14. Have you ever been convicted of a crime?
15. Do you claim deferred classification? If so, on which of the following grounds: Physical condition, dependency, occupation, alien status, or moral unfitness.

The organization returned Tuesday from its good will tour of South America and is presenting concerts this week in New York, Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia before disbanding.

The first part of the program is devoted to transcriptions of Bach: Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Arioso from the F minor Chlavichord Concerto, Prelude from Partita in E major, Passacaglia in C minor, and the Chorale-Prelude, "Mein Jesu, was durer Seelenweh befaellst Du in Gethsemane." The second part consists of Dmitri Shostokovich's fifth symphony.

N. Y. Times Urges Willkie For Presidency

Prefers 'Business Man' to 'Amateur' In Building Defense

New York, Sept. 18 (INS).—The New York Times, independent Democratic newspaper which supported the election and reelection of President Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936, tonight announced in a leading editorial that it will support Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican nominee, for the Presidency.

Explaining its stand, the New York Times states:

"We give our own support to Mr. Willkie primarily for these reasons: Because we believe that he is better equipped than Mr. Roosevelt to provide this country with an adequate national defense; because we believe that he is a practical liberal who understands the need of increased production; because we believe the fiscal policies of Mr. Roosevelt have failed disastrously; because we believe that at a time when the traditional safeguards of democracy are falling everywhere it is particularly important to honor and preserve the American tradition against vesting the enormous powers of the Presidency in the hands of any man for three consecutive terms of office."

The editorial praises President Roosevelt for many steps he has taken in connection with America's national defense program, but accuses him of concentrating too much power in his own hands over too many details and of failure to "cut the endless red tape in Washington" in connection with the activities of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

The newspaper states:

"He has . . . tried to be his own defense administration and retained in his own hands control over too many details of a defense program which still lacks central planning. He has seemed to regard the whole business of defense as a sideshow to the ordinary activities of the country. . . ."

"It is a reasonable assumption that this same problem can be managed better by a man who understands business, who has the confidence of business, who has himself been a part of business. . . . In this field Mr. Willkie is the professional and Mr. Roosevelt the amateur."

Referring to the social legislation of the New Deal, The Times goes on to "welcome the fact that Mr. Willkie stands pledged to conserve rather than to destroy what is best in Mr. Roosevelt's reforms." It says Mr. Roosevelt has put his own reform in peril.

"He has put them in peril," it says, "by ignoring or by failing to understand the fundamental problem of increased production; by encouraging large numbers of Americans to believe that it is possible to grow richer by working less and producing less; by fostering the idea that there exists somewhere a great fund of wealth which has only to be divided more equitably in order to make everybody prosperous; by permitting important members of his Administration to preach the doctrines of class jealously and class hatred."

500 U.S. Planes A Month Now Go to Britain

Output Being Stepped Up for 'Spring Drive' Against Germany

American military airlanes, officials of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce estimated yesterday, are now being built and delivered to the British at the rate of 500 units a month. They added that this production is being stepped up in anticipation of an aerial "spring drive" against Germany and predicted that it will reach a delivery peak of 1,000 planes a month by next February or March.

At that time, according to the Aircraft Trade Association, warplane exports to England and Canada will level off to 540 or 575 ships a month, maintaining that volume until April, 1942, when, under the program of the National Defense Advisory Commission, a total of 14,000 airplanes will have been delivered to the British and 19,000 to the United States Army and Navy. The drop in British production early next year will be matched by a corresponding increase in combat airplane deliveries to this company's flying services.

The Aeronautical Chamber's figures on plane production for the British includes both combat and training types although current deliveries of the former outnumber the latter about two and one-half to one and this ratio undoubtedly will increase as the volume of planes going to Great Britain grows and she nears her self-appointed "zero hour" in the air. This again is in accord with plans of the Army and Navy whose immediate need is for training planes in which to qualify pilots who must man their combat ships when they are delivered.

Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber, refused to speculate on comparative American and British production of aircraft for the Royal Air Force, but some manufacturers maintain, on the basis of private reports they have received from England, that this country's warplane deliveries to the British soon will equal or even exceed the entire output of Great Britain's aircraft industry.

Others are convinced that this may already be true, as a result of the Nazi air force's continued mass raids on England. Their reasoning is that, even if British airplane factories have not been destroyed or crippled, working time in them must have been cut at least half by incessant air-raid alarms.

It is generally conceded in aviation circles that 80 and perhaps 90 per cent of all military airplanes now being built in this country are going either to England or Canada. Many observers feel that this particular type of "aid, short of war" to the British constitutes a serious menace to America's own aerial rearmament program and that the country may wake some day to the realization that it has dangerously deferred building up its own air strength. All contracts made with the British by American aircraft manufacturers contain a clause permitting the Army or Navy to preempt export production whenever the national safety necessitates such a move, but there has been no exercise of this prerogative up to now.

Defense Board Would Defer Oil Trust Suit

Successful Outcome Held Likely to Impair Rearming of Nation

The National Defense Commission, in a report made public last night, said that certain phases of the defense program would be delayed and complicated if the Justice Department went through with an antitrust suit to force oil companies to relinquish control of transportation and marketing facilities.

The report was made public by Attorney General Jackson, who had asked the commission for an opinion before proceeding with a suggested civil action against the American Petroleum Institute, 22 major oil companies and about 300 subsidiaries and affiliates.

Jackson said tonight that he would announce his next step after studying the report.

Might Impair Efficiency

"In considering the effect of the prayer for divesture by the oil company defendants of their transportation and marketing functions," the commission report said, "the commission recognizes that, apart from other considerations, the existing organizational structure of the oil industry is well adapted to the defense program. It simplifies problems of supply, and facilitates the making of firm and long-range commitments. Divesture may entail a loss of technical management and efficiency.

"The readjustments contemplated by the suit, and the process of habituation under a new set-up, will involve complications and delays. Curbs on capital expansion, certainly during the period when the split-ups are still in contemplation and not yet in effect, must be anticipated.

"Doubts and uncertainties may arise as to whether a company should undertake capital expansion in properties which may be divested, as to who will be able to afford such exansions (in view of the prospective division of capital resources), and even as to who could appropriately apply for Government assistance in such expansion. Eventually the Government will, of course, find some way to assure its supply. But time is precious.

"The commission finds it impossible to estimate with precision or exactitude the extent to which obstacles to industrial preparation for national defense are presented by the relief prayed for in the complaint. However, the commission does not suggest that the proposed suit should be abandoned.

"The commission feels it appropriate to point out, nevertheless, that to a greater or less degree certain prayers for relief may hinder the defense program."

Crash Drivers Must Tell It to Judge

Police to Send Them to Court Even for Minor Law Violations

By Howard F. Wentworth

A revised system of traffic prosecutions under which few motorists involved in accidents will escape appearance in court will become effective Sunday when the police department's new accident investigation squad begins operations, it was learned last night.

On the premise that most accidents are caused by law infractions, Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the new "crash" unit, announced that drivers deemed responsible for accidents—no matter how minor—will be charged, and made to appear in Traffic Court.

The practice of holding preliminary hearings in accident cases before an assistant corporation counsel in Police Court will be eliminated under the new setup, Miller said. Members of his squad, investigating every reported accident, will place responsibility for each crash and take the accused motorist directly into court, Miller explained.

Heretofore, blame for an accident and necessity for prosecution have been established at a preliminary hearing in the corporation counsel's Police Court office, where crash-involved autoists were summoned by police.

"We intend to do away with this system—except in cases where there is no evidence of a violation but the principals still insist on a hearing. Then the complaining drivers must appear voluntarily before the corporation counsel and summon the investigating policeman as a witness," Miller said.

With adoption of the new policy, it will be the duty of every motorist involved in an accident—even of the scraped fender variety—to call police and wait at the scene until a "crash" car has arrived, Milller warned.

"And if our investigation reveals any evidence of a law infraction, the responsible driver will be charged on the spot," Miller said.

Arrests, he added, will be made only in flagrant cases. Tickets will be issued in the others.

Seek More Convictions

All fatal accidents will receive special attention from the police investigators, Miller said, and it will be their aim to increase the percentage of convictions in such cases.

Detective Sergt. William Liverman has been named chief investigator of the 31-man squad. With a wide experience in traffic matters as ace investigator for the homicide squad, Liverman will be on 24-hour call and will personally supervise inquiries at every major mishap, Miller said.

The squad will patrol day and night in six specially-equipped cars. They will answer all traffic complaints. Each car will carry a camera, measuring line, flares, blankets and first aid equipment. Members of the unit were selected following intensive training under Miller, a recent graduate of the Northwestern University Traffic Institute.

The squad will include Sergts. A. B. Clark, T. T. Heffernan and T. E. Edwards and Pvts. A. B. Nicholson, H. B. Quantrille, T. L. Hansen, R. P. Herlong, W. K. Everett, C. G. Darnell, F H. Dunn, E. R. D. C. Sailor's Yacht Grounds Off Florida

Lewis Cotten, of Washington, who left a WPA job for an ocean cruise, yesterday escaped injury when his 70-foot yacht, the Kohala, ran aground on a reef in St. Andrews Bay, near Panama City, Fla.

The boat, with Cotten and two companions aboard, was towed from the reef by the Coast Guard cutter Boutwell, it was reported. The craft was slightly damaged.

Friends have said Cotten had been an WPA assignment clerk until recently, when he left to begin the cruise.

Hardware Association Changes Name, Rules

The Retail Hardware Association, meeting last night at the Mayflower Hotel, changed its name to the Washington Hardware Association and opened its membership to all local men whose business is devoted 25 per cent to hardware.

By-laws were changed to conform with the new name. Previously the organization admitted to membership only those engaged in the retail hardware business.

Autopsy Is Ordered In D. C. Man's Death

The coroner's office last night ordered an autopsy in the death of John D. Froom, 55, who was found dead in his room at the D. C. Hotel, 816 K street northwest, yesterday. He was found by a colored maid, Ona Hodges, and had died apparently during the night.

Hotel attendants said Froom, a furloughed employe of the Federal Works Agency, had lived at the hotel since July 15.

District Democrats Open Headquarters

The District Democratic Central Committee yesterday opened headquarters at the Burlington Hotel, Vermont avenue at Thomas circle northwest. Headquarters will be open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. until election with rallies scheduled to be held twice a week beginning Monday.

Liquor Store Transfer Opposed

Five Congressmen Protest at ABC Hearing; Ballou Has No Objection

The influence of five members of Congress yesterday was thrown against the transfer of the Bond Liquor store from 1416 New York avenue northwest, to 931 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, at an Alcoholic Beverage Control board hearing.

Maurice Milstone, owner of the Acme Liquor Store, 927 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, also opposed the transfer. Milstone, who appeared at the hearing yesterday, said he had not solicited, "directly or indirectly," the opposition letters sent to the liquor board by the Congressmen. Supt Frank W. Ballou, of public schools, has no objections to the transfer, it was said.

The letters were sent to Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the board, by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada; Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina; Representative Poage (Democrat), of Texas; Representative Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, and Representative Fish (Republican), of New York.

Friends Advise Reynolds

Senator Reynolds said he had been advised of the proposed transfer by "my friends" and that the transfer would mean opening a liquor store adjoining another. He said three stores already are located within 700 feet of 931 Pennsylvania avenue.

"Will you please be so kind as to look into this matter and advise me if the transfer will not be a violation of your established practice and precedent which has been followed in the past in cases of this kind," he wrote.

Representative Fish cited the New York law, which prohibits a liquor store within 1,500 feet of another.

"I think any attempt to open another store in that vicinity will not meet with the approval of the people of the District," he said.

Senator McCarran asked the board to reject the application, citing the New York law.

Representative Poage said, "Surely there can be no possible public convenience to be served by the granting of another license to serve this same community."

An "Ardent Hope"

Representative Van Zandt said, "It is my ardent hope you will give serious consideration to the fact that there is a sufficient number of liquor stores in this block."

The board closed the hearings, but will not announce its decision until next week.

Lucius Beebe, in Blue, Gray and Mauve, Has New Car 'Bashed' in Visit to Capital

Spends Afternoon Photographing Trains For Picture 'Trilogy'

Lucius Beebe, his blue serge suit and gray tie relieved by a mauve shirt, hit the Capital "on a dead run" last night but paused long enough to loose a volley at Washington drivers.

"Can you imagine that?" the New York fashion and night life authority demanded. "I drive a new car down here, park it, and it gets bashed in by some Federal worker. He must have known I was a Tribune man." (He is a writer for the New York Herald Tribune.)

Beebe explained he was taking a vacation from the "gag column" in order to indulge his avocation—photographing trains.

"Yes, you get pretty tired of the so-called whirl. I can stand it because there is always a laugh," he declared, "but, do I have to talk about it on my vacation?"

Photographs Trains

The columnist said he had spent the afternoon at the Potomac Yards near Alexandria "shooting" incoming trains. He is now compiling a book—a "photographic trilogy"—devoted entirely to pictures of speeding trains and locomotives, he declared.

Questioned about reports he arrived in Washington garbed in a blue, green and brown suit, Beebe announced vehemently:

"Nothing to it—I usually stick to a severe puce."

He added:

"But I'll whip one up if they insist—anything for copy, I guess."

Training his machine gun monologue on Hollywood, he said:

"One day a tailor showed up with a 'garment.' So help me, it had 36 colors in a pattern you could play hop scotch on. But I figured maybe I had ordered the damn thing in a moment of unrecollection, so I told him to make it up."

"Well, I wore it once down at Fort Worth—you know, I thought I ought to try it out in the bushes before I got back to New York.

LUCIUS BEEBE
Photographing Train

Recalls the Time He Wore a Suit With 36 Colors

"The pay-off was out at the local airport. The manager said he'd give me $25 a week to stand at the end of the runway as a pylon."

"It's a 'Hate' Gag"

Beebe flicked the ash off a cigar, then remarked reflectively:

"Sure, I'll wear a purple opera hat with a sunburst if the readers in Gallipolis go for it. After all, it's a 'hate' gag anyway."

Then he asked directions to Connecticut avenue and muttered something about his damaged automobile.

"Got to get back into the groove," were his parting words.

Redskins Are Guests Of Advertising Club

Three members of the Washington Redskin football team and Joseph A. Frohock, "good-will ambassador" from St. Petersburg, Fla., were presented to the Advertising Club of Washington yesterday at the first of the club's informal luncheons in the Raleigh Hotel.

End Charlie Malone, End Bob McChesney and Back Bob Hoffman made short talks, and Frohock, St. Petersburg radio commentator, invited the members to Florida.

The physician is chairman of the society's committee on medical resources, which is cooperating in the District's conscription program.

Auto Injuries Kill Md. Man; 2 Hurt in Traffic

Two persons were injured here in accidents yesterday and a third traffic victim, injured in Maryland, died in Casualty Hospital. Carl Vallandingham, 31, of Clinto, Md., succumbed to injuries suffered last Saturday when his car overturned at Floral Park, Md.

Broken toes were suffered by Marjorie Rosenberg, 22, of 1010 Twenty-fifth street northwest, when she stepped off the curb at Tenth and H streets northwest and an auto ran over her foot. Police listed the car driver as Elizabeth Wagoner, of Cottage City, Md.

Policeman's Pistol Stolen From Home

A thief yesterday slipped into the home of Oren J. Henning, 624 Sixth street northeast, and left with $35 in valuables, as well as a police service pistol.

Palace Newcomer Brings Back Henry Fonda As Misunderstood, Highminded Highwayman; Slight Shavings of Other Theatricalia

By Richard L. Coe
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

"THE RETURN OF FRANK JAMES." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original screen play by Sam Hellman, starring Henry Fonda, with Jackie Cooper, Gene Tierney, Henry Hull, John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg, Donald Meek, Eddie Collins, George Barbier, Ernest Whitman, Charles Tannen, Lloyd Corrigan, Victor Kilian, Edward McWade, George Chandler, Irving Bacon, Frank Shannon, Barbara Pepper, Louis Mason and Stymie Beard. Directed by Fritz Lang. Previewed Tuesday afternoon. At the Palace Theater.

IN THEIR PERSUASIVE FASHION, the films long have made of historical misfits souls more sinned against than sinning. Never having known the James boys personally, all we know is what we see in the movies, the latest of which is "The Return of Frank James," opening this morning at the Palace. It's so enjoyable a tale of righteous indignation that you're solid agin' law and order from the first flick of Technicolor.

Taking last things first, "The Return of Frank James" boasts a courtroom scene that is the literal, temporal grandpappy of all the riotous courtroom sequences we've been seeing since "The Awful Truth." This one turns on whether the Civil War was a Rebellion or a War Between the States. It's mighty important decision that comes out of all this, for even if Lee lost the Civil War he indirectly saved Frank James' life.

Frank, you may recall from "Jesse James," was Tyrone Power's brother in the person of Henry Fonda, a Fonda so capable that he was pushed into the background long before the fadeout to afford Jesse proper dying space. Jesse was shot in the back as the finale of that film; this successful successor finds brother Frank, living a quiet farm life with friend Clem, trusting that his brother's assassins will get the death penalty.

But those bad, bad men, the bankers, the railroad officials and the crooked legalites conspire to avert such bloody revenge. The murdering Ford brothers are pardoned. So the natural thing is for Frank and his young friend, played by Jackie Cooper, to get about Jesse's revenge in their own manner. A charming neophyte newsgal tries to halt the bloodshed. Of course she doesn't. What really saves Frank is his ability to plunder only the crooked, to cross only the righteous "good" people to fight the wolves in sheep's clothing.

So that's why, all over again, we're on the side of crime. So is Henry Hull, again the crusading newspaper editor of the '80's, and this time also playing a defense attorney with humor and relish. Gene Tierney, late of the stage's "The Male Animal," makes a notable debut as the gal who loves Frank but never gets him into a clinch. George Barbier is elegant as the paunchy judge. (Have you noticed that judgeships are getting to be as rewarding in the films as they are in real life?) John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg and Donald Meek return in their former characterizations.

Henry Fonda and the rapidly maturing Jackie Cooper have the pivotal roles, playing with vigor and respect people who are not so bad as they are painted.

All you Floridians will be interested in the Magic Carpet's "Land of Flowers," while the Passing Parade's "The Baron and the Rose" is the second short subject. With its excellent photography in ever-improving Technicolor, "The Return of Frank James" is a rip-snorter of genuine elegance.

SHAVINGS: Mickey Rooney arrives at 8:30 this morning at Union Station for his week of five shows a day at the Capitol. He'll be interviewed on the spot by reporters of the local high school papers, with musical background by Loew's Cadet Band and the Police Boys' Club Band . . . Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life" is the first subscription play of the American Theater Society. At the National, October 7. . . . Warner's have opened a circulating library in both the Earle and the Tivoli of books the firm plans to film. Only requirements for five days' free reading is your name in the phone book. . . . "Ecstasy," coupled with "Hold That Woman," continues through Saturday at the Open-Air. . . . The Variety Club dedicates its new quarters Saturday evening. . . . Horror note: Jimmy Roosevelt's picture juke boxes—dubbed "soundies"—are a coming boon . . . to the opticians.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Sept. 18.

You've all seen Nat Pendleton on the screen, and would you believe that rough exterior hides an aching heart? Well, it does—because he always has to play a ninny, while the hero gets kissed. So he's had time to watch the various techniques. Here are a few of Nat's osculatory observations: Myrna Loy's are cool and sweet. Laraine Day gives a man a kiss with a fuse on it—just a taste of dynamite. Ruth Hussey's are soft, fervent and clinging. Jeanette MacDonald's he describes in one word—"Wow!" Ann Sheridan's a dormant volcano come to life. Marlene Dietrich's—slow, sure, but lasting. Alice Faye's—rhythm added to tantalizing. There, you have it, boys. What do you think? Nat's not sure, 'cause he's never been kissed on the screen.

HOPPER

When Shirley Temple retired from the screen to catch up with her homework, Lynne Overman sent her a $4 telegram demanding payment of a nickel bet. Six years ago Lynne made his screen debut in "Little Miss Marker," in which Shirley appeared. "I predicted then," said Lynne, "she'd be the biggest box office draw in Hollywood history and bet her a nickel I'd last longer in pictures. So here's Shirley, temporarily retired at the ripe old age of 11, and I'm still struggling. And I want my nickel."

Well, Producer Boris Morros has broken three jinxes. First he reunited Laurel and Hardy in "Flying Deuces" after they'd sworn they'd never work together again. Then he hired Artie Shaw for "Second Chorus" after he said he was through with pictures, after which he got permission from O. Henry's widow to do "The American Vagabond," the story of O. Henry's life, when she had refused offers from many other producers.

"Middle age," says Albert Basserman, "is that period in your life when you try to recall what you ate yesterday."

When Director Dave Butler wants to squelch gum-chewers on the "You'll Find Out" set, he bawls out: "You working for RKO—or for Wrigley?"

When Kay Francis asked Fritz Lang what the first requisite of a good director is, he said, "To be able to disagree without being disagreeable."

Gen. Pershing on the eve of his eightieth birthday may sign away the rights of his life story for a film to be made at Metro. This was talked about some time ago, deal didn't go through. The general could only see Gary Cooper in his part, and Metro doesn't own Cooper.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

New York, Sept. 18 (INS).—Betty Grable gets exactly one week off from the minute she finishes "Tin Pan Alley" until she starts her third musical at Twentieth Century-Fox, "Tall, Dark and Handsome." This Grable rush can only mean that Darryl Zanuck thinks he has a real hit in the ex-Mrs. Jackie Coogan who couldn't get a job in Hollywood a year ago. Betty doesn't get that seven days off to loaf, either. She signed a contract with a Chicago theater for a week's personal appearance before she signed with Twentieth Century-Fox, and they're demanding that she fulfill that agreement right now.

PARSONS

If the offers made Shirley Temple were put end to end, they would reach to New York and back. The latest and one of the most interesting is made her by Bob Stokes and Paul Edmonds to merely lend her voice to the cartoon character of "Sassy Sis." In the event the offer is accepted, Stokes, who was formerly key man at the Walt Disney studios, says that Shirley, who is now at the awkward age, would keep her contact with the public and not be seen until she is a little older. The character of "Sassy Sis" is a 5-year-old girl who will appear in a series of 13 cartoons made in color. Shirley's voice is, of course, known to millions, but I rather fancy Mrs. Temple will prefer some of those other tempting stage and movie offers made to her famous daughter.

Snapshorts of Hollywood collected at random: That stunning new pin Gertrude Niesenis wearing is Wynn Rocoma's telephone number in diamond numerals; Frances Brice, Fanny's 21-year-old daughter, and Ray Starke, magazine editor, will be married any day now; the Stan Laurel-Alice Ardell romance continues hot and heavy. They were at the Bali; Tony Martin has eyes only for Patty McCarthy, Dorothy Lamour's peppy little secretary; the Artie Shaw opening in San Francisco was such a riot he had them dancing out in the hotel lobby. Roger Pryor flew up to the Shaw's opening with Ann Sothern's beautiful red-headed sister, Bonnie, and got the kick of his life when a cautious columnist referred to his companion as "a red-headed mystery woman—not Ann Sothern"; Orson Welles and Dolores Del Rio at the Pomona Fair had a whole raft of autograph hunters trailing around after them.

Errol Flynn and Johnny Weissmuller will introduce a new sport to Southern California when they sponsor the water ski festival at Catalina on September 29 (I can't stand up on skiis on land—much less on water); September 25 is the date now set for the birth of the Weissmuller baby, although Mrs. W. has had a hospital room engaged since September 1; John Shelton's new heart is Dorothy Heinz (of the 57 varieties family), and she'll help him receive when he housewarms his new home.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Capital's 'Legit' Season Opens Monday With 'Pins, Needles'

Satirical Revue Relights the National; Mickey Rooney in Person at the Captol; Other Bills of Incoming Theater Week

"PINS AND NEEDLES," Washington's legitimate season opens at the National Theater Monday evening with this satirical revue as the attraction. After 1,105 performances in New York—the longest run ever achieved by a musical—the production is in the early stages of a Nation-wide forty-week tour. Although a touring company was seen at the National in 1938, only one number remains from the first edition, the tuneful "Sunday in the Park," while the New York company remains intact for this tour. Also produced by Labor Stage of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, this new edition strikes its barbs within the American scene exclusively. Harold J. Rome composed the music and Joseph Schrank wrote the sketches. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Capitol

MICKEY ROONEY, the country's No. 1 boxoffice star, opens a week's engagement this morning on the Capitol stage in a revue titled, "Andy Hardy in Washington." The young man will appear five times a day, beginning at 11:30 a. m.; the Capitol doors open at 9:30 a. m. Those in the stage revue with him include Judy Starr Four Lazanders, Jack Beekman and Robinson and Martin. On the screen, "Wyoming" stars Wallace Beery, with Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Main, Ann Rutherford, Lee Bowman, Paul Kelly and Joseph Calleia. Beery and Carrillo have a similar outdoor vehicle to their "20 Mule Team." Opens this morning.

RKO-Keith's

"HIRED WIFE." Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne and Virginia Bruce share honors with Robert Benchley in the top spots of this new Universal comedy. While Miss Russell and Miss Bruce are both noted for their comedy metier, this is not a new field to Mr. Aherne, either, although his recent films, "My Son, My Son" and "Vigil in the Night" have been on the somber side. John Carroll, Robert Cavanaugh, William Davidson, Richard Lane and Charles Smith have the chief supporting roles. Also on the new Keith bill is the latest "March of Time" release, "On Foreign Newsfronts." Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"SPORTING BLOOD." Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan and Lewis Stone costar in this film of the Virginia horse country. The story is of two families estranged for many years, and turns on the breaking of a trait in a horse trained not to pass another on the track. William Gargan, Lynne Carver, Clarence Muse, Lloyd Corrigan, George Reed and Tom Kennedy Glenn Miller, his orchestra and entertainers bring their popular airwave melodies to headline the sage revue. Follows "The Howards of Virginia."

Columbia

"MYSTERY SEA RAIDER." From the sinking of the Athenia and the rescue of the British prisoners aboard the Altmark, to marie activity in the Caribbean, this film tells a purely fictional tale of the current war. "Apache" is the name of the imaginary ship whose adventures are traced, while the possibility that the Nazis might have pressed the "City of Flint" into raider service also forms part of the plot. Henry Wilcoxen, Carole Landis and Onslow Stevens head the cast of the new release. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST." After a successful week of laughter at the Earle, this comedy of communists and their inhibitions reopens at the Metropolitan. The background is pre-Hitle Paris; Melvyn Douglas, Loretta Young, Eugene Pallette, Alan Marshall, Una O'Connor, Curt Bois and Leonid Kinskey are the players. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"THE FUGITIVE." This British story of an ordinary man's mental collapse after he has fallen into chance thievery stars Ralph Richardson and Diana Wynyard. Also on the Little screen is a short version of the Richard Tauber-Jimmy Durante musical, "Forbidden Music."

Trans-Lux

"GATEWAYS TO PANAMA." the "March of Time" release concerning our defense problems at the Canal Zone, is the central short subject at the newsreel theater for the coming week. "Hobby Lobby" reveals some of Mrs. Roosevelt's hobbies, while Disney's "Donald's Vacation" is the color cartoon. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"HOT FROM PARIS." Despite its questionable title, the Gayety's new burlesque production, opening Sunday afternoon, is said to have more life than its tragic name. Two display artists head the company, Noel Carter and Billie Ainsley, while Bert Carr, Harry Reede, Tommy Ryan, Joan Mavis and Zara, the dancer, have the major supporting spots. Scarlette Kelly continues through this Saturday's midnight performance.

New York, Sept. 18.

HARRY HOPKINS, long a tenant at the White House, will move his belongings from there. The former Secretary of Commerce will settle in New York City . . . Charles Michelson, publicity director for the Democratic National Committee, has requested the broadcasting chains for free time in response to Willkie's campaign speech Monday night. Michelson's protest is based upon the fact that Roosevelt's Labor Day broadcast had been considered a political speech, and that it really wasn't . . . Because the ban on gambling will be removed in Mexico, after Cardenas' retirement, A. C. AVILA COMACHO, president-elect of Mexico, had emissaries approach the State Department before announcing his planned visit to the States. When the emissaries assured him that the State Department viewed his trip with favor, he decided to make the trip. He will arrive next week for a three-day visit, to Washington and New York City . . . In the meantime his rival, Gen. Almazan, will make no criticism of Avila Comacho's leaving the country before the inauguration. When I met Almazan in Balboa, Canal Zone, last month, he told of his plan to remain on American soil until the election results were announced. To the suggestion that this was a cause of "out of sight, out of shot," Almazan replied that it had no relation to his personal safety—"for, after all, Teddy Roosevelt made a long trip, too, before his inaugural."

WENDELL WILLKIE will broadcast for the transcribed radio show, "Famous Fathers." He will be interviewed by Howard Lindsay, star and coauthor of "Life With Father" . . . "Okay," sighed the wire-manager, "but I want to tell you—I think you're making a terrible mistake."

Accused Slayer Of Husband Denied Bail

Mrs. Rush Ordered Held For Grand Jury Action; Can't Attend Funeral

Jail authorities last night denied permission to Mary Elizabeth Sibley Rush, 25, to attend funeral services for her husband, Oscar Rush, 42-year-old automobile salesman, whom she is accused of shooting and fatally wounding Monday.

Through her attorney, Charles E. Ford, Mrs. Rush made her request shortly after she was ordered held for the grand jury by a coroner's jury. She was, however, allowed to view Rush's body at the District Morgue a few minutes before the hearing. Without any outward sign of emotion, she gazed at it for several minutes before walking into the hearing room to face the jury.

She sat calmly through the inquest, sometimes intent, but mostly with her head resting on the table before her.

She was not present when the jury returned a verdict after 17 minutes deliberation, but when told by her lawyer that she was held, she made no sound. Bail was denied her.

Policeman Maurice Deakins, Eleventh Precinct, first witness, testified Mrs. Rush told him she had planned to shoot her husband last May, but that Rush had taken her gun away.

"I'm A Good Shot"

He was taking the defendant to the Eleventh Precinct immediately after the shooting, Deakins said, when she asked if her husband was dead. Deakins said he told her he did not think she had hit Rush.

"I'm a good shot and I aimed at his heart. I must have hit him," she was quoted by the witness.

"About two years ago," Flaherty quoted the woman, "I was in a beer joint in Alabama. I met Rush and 20 minutes later he asked me to marry him. We drove to Jackson, Ala., about a 20-minute ride, and were married.

"The next morning I told him I was already married to Pruitt (Wallace P. Pruitt, 809 Eighteenth street northwest) and asked him what I should do. He said he loved me and wanted me to stay with him."

Mrs. Rush returned to Washington, according to her statement, and met Pruitt and told him of her second marriage. He agreed to have his marriage annulled so that she could remain with Rush, her statement said.

Rush Refused to See Her

Flaherty said that Mrs. Rush told him she had made several trips to Alabama to see Rush, but that when he came to Washington he refused to see her. She was living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Sibley, 33 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Last Sunday, Flaherty continued, the couple met about 3 p. m. in front of the Congressional Library and went to a restaurant for some drinks. Mrs. Rush said she refused beer, Flaherty asserted, and told her husband she wanted to attend Sunday evening church service.

After the service, the detective declared, she was unable to locate her husband and telephoned his rooming house, 1006 North Carolint avenue southeast, but he was not home. She waited for him and when he returned he would not let her into the house, she told police.

She sat in his automobile and at 3 a. m. Monday awoke Rush. They had an argument and she pulled a gun and Rush agreed to leave the house with her, Flaherty related.

It was testified that Mrs. Rush bought the gun, a .22 caliber target revolver, in Washington in 1935 to use at target practice. She sawed off the barrel and stock so that it would fit into her handbag, it was said.

Mrs. Lillian Davidson, 1525 Nineteenth street southeast, and Mrs. Gladys Jones, 1941 Sixteenth street southeast, both of whom were in the car with Rush when he was shot, testified they had stopped to talk with the salesman while waiting for their husbands, both of whom worked with Rush.

When Mrs. Rush walked up, they said, she was introduced and stood talking for several minutes.

"Rush was telling us about the hard night he had," Mrs. Davidson stated. "When his wife walked up we were kidding him and she pulled a gun and shot him."

Wallace Pruitt, the defendant's first husband, attended the inquest. He did not testify, but told reporters he married Elizabeth Sibley in December, 1936, and that their marriage was annulled at her request in 1938.

Dr. Garrett Rush, 1101 Massachusetts avenue northwest, a first cousin of Rush, completed plans for the slain man's funeral after receiving a release from Mrs. Rush. She granted permission to relatives to bury him, her attorney said, only on the condition he be buried in Arlington Cemetery. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Hines funeral home. Burial will be in Arlington.

The masters' opening bids are becoming "lighter and lighter," and we doubt that a year or two ago R. B. S. would even ask whether this hand was worth an opening bid. But today, with all the "birdseed" bids of the experts, ordinary players are opening weaker.

Congress Praised For Taking Only 3 Months on Draft

Congress deserves commendation for having taken only three months to pass the draft law, Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, executive officer of the Army and Navy Selective Service Committee, told the Washington Rotary Club yesterday at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel.

Under present circumstances, volunteering alone would be inefficient and disorderly, according to Col. Hershey; inefficient because there would be no telling how long it would take to recruit the number needed, and disorderly because social pressure eventually would be applied against men of eligible ages who were not in uniform.

The speaker emphasized that it takes intensive training to turn green recruits or conscripts into good combatants.

Bob Feller Tops Hudson In Nightcap

Johnny Allen Wins First Over Chase, 3-1; Weatherly's Homer Helps Feller Win, 2-1

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, Sept. 18.—Unveiling Bob Feller in a pitching coup, the Cleveland Indians vaulted back into the league lead today with a double victory over the Nats, 3 to 1 and 2 to 1.

After Johnny Allen had won a first-game duel with Ken Chase, Manager Vitt met the challenge of Sid Hudson by calling on Feller for a surprise appearance. Pitching with only two days rest, Feller served up a five-hit performance to beat Washington's prize rookie and restore the Indians to the league lead.

Over in Detroit, the Philadelphia Athletics were parties to the change of league leadership. With a nine-run ninth inning, they won the second game of a double-header and toppled the Tigers out of the lead.

	W	L	G.B.	T.P.
Cleveland	84	61	—	9
Detroit	83	61	½	10
New York	79	64	4	11
Chicago	79	66	5	9

Meeting up with Feller for the first time in his big league career, Hudson gave the league's number one pitcher a valiant battle of it but fell victim to a home run by Roy Weatherly in the sixth inning which broke a scoreless tie. Feller himself drove out a single in the seventh that fetched the Indians their winning run.

The first game was a cheaply-gained victory for the Indians who were staked to all of their runs by Ken Chase who encountered a ghastly spell of wildness and walked all three Cleveland runs across the plate in the second inning.

Johnny Allen, Chase's pitching opponent, gave up only six hits to the Nats.

Makes Spectacular Catch

Roy Weatherly was a co-hero with Feller in the Indians' second-game triumph. His homer not only brought the Indians their first run, but in the third inning he broke up a threatening rally by the Nats with a spectacular shoe-string catch in centerfield.

With two out in the third, Feller walked Hudson and Case beat out an infield single to set the stage for Weatherly's brilliant play. Buddy Lewis drove a fierce line drive into centerfield and Weatherly nose-dived for the ball, retaining it through a series of somersaults on the turf. The play drew down the prolonged cheers of the 12,000 customers.

Feller made motions toward setting a season strikeout record by fanning seven Nats in the first five innings, but he lost his blazing fast ball at that point and relied on a curve, failing to add to his strike-outs.

Buddy Lewis delivered Hudson from immediate trouble in the sixth when he made a brilliant throw to cut down Ben Chapman at second base when Chapman tried to stretch a single into a double. Weatherly's homer, off a curve ball which he

Nine Runs in 9th Net A's Split With Tigers

Detroit Knocked From Lead After Winning First Game, 14-0; Athletics Win Second With Late Rally, 13-6; Greenberg Stars

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 18.—For the second straight day the cellar-dwelling Philadelphia Athletics rose up to knock a team out of the American League lead.

The A's, who shoved Cleveland down to second place yesterday, exploded a 9-run rally in the final inning of the second game today to gain a 13-to-6 victory and a split with the Detroit Tigers in a double-header played before 12,757 fans.

Coupled with Cleveland's double win over Washington, the nightcap loss dropped Detroit a half-game behind the Indians in the wild late September pennant scramble.

Greenberg Hits Three

The Tigers won the first game, 14 to 0, as Tommy Bridges and Tom Seats pitched shutout ball and Hank Greenberg belted two of the three homers he hit during the afternoon.

The Athletics' nine-run game-winning rally was started by Pinch-Hitter Chubby Dean with an infield single after one was out. Before the Tigers could retire two more men the Macks had rapped out nine more hits, including a homer by Bob Johnson with two teammates on base.

George Caster went the route for the Athletics in the opener and was tagged for 17 hits. Bridges and Seats, who came in at the start of the seventh to give Bridges a chance to rest for the Cleveland series opening here Friday, allowed only six blows. The A's threatened only in the third when they filled the sacks with one man out.

Detroit won the game with a five-run rally in the first and a seven score outburst in the fifth.

In the opening inning Greenberg got the first of his three homers with the bases loaded. It was his thirty-sixth of the year. His next came in the third with the sacks empty.

Doubles by Charley Gehringer, Rud York and Frank Higgins featured the big fifth inning for Detroit.

Gorsica Settles Down

The second game was a see-saw battle between Johnny Gorsica, of the Tigers, and Ed Heusser, of the A's, until the fifth when Greenberg's last homer sparked a two-run assault that gave Detroit a 6-to-4 lead. Gorsica pitched to only nine batsmen in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

Rollicking Browns Stop Red Sox, 11-2

St. Louis Raises Lead Over Nats To 1½ Games

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 18.—The Browns established themselves more firmly in sixth place today by walloping the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 2, while Washington was losing twice to the Cleveland Indians.

The Browns now have an advantage of 1½ games over the Senators. With only 10 contests left, they can't overtake the Red Sox, who are in fifth place by 14 games.

Getting two triples and six doubles among their 14 hits, the Browns had an easy time downing Boston. Bob Harris limited the Sox to 9 hits, Roger Cramer's single driving in their only runs.

Mike Cherello Looms as C. U. Place-kicker

For Coach "Dutch" Bergman has unearthed, quite accidentally, a fine pigskin booter in Mike Cherello, stocky 185-pound guard from Morristown, N. J. A junior this year, Mike won his first football letter last season.

Mike first came to the attention of Bergman during Saturday's scrimmage against Maryland University at College Park. The score of this session, the second held, ended up 21 to 6 in favor of the Redbirds and it was Mike who accounted for the three extra points after touchdowns. In Monday's scrimmage he had an average of .500, kicking one through the uprights in two tries.

Surprised no little with the accuracy and ease that the little Italian boots the ball through the posts, Bergman, who is stressing scoring punch plays more than a solid defense, immediately laid down plans to have Mike's eyes and toe trained for bigger and better points—namely field goals.

Notre Dame Camp Hit by Injuries

Owen Evans, South Bend left halfback, was sent to the infirmary with a sprained ankle.

A sellout of Notre Dame's allotment of tickets for its game against Army in New York's Yankee Stadium was announced today. J. Arthur Haley, Irish athletics business manager, said this was the fourteenth consecutive year the university's supply of tickets for the contest had been exhausted.

The event is a three-partner affair, with the simon-pures allotted half handicap allowance.

Yankees Edge Chisox After Losing Opener

Darkness Aids in 9-8 Victory Following 6-3 Defeat by Chicago; Crowd of 37,331 Sees Games

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Darkness descended upon Comiskey Park today just in time to help the New York Yankees to edge out the Chicago White Sox, 9 to 8, in eight innings in the second game of a double-header after the Sox had elated a rabid crowd of 37,331 Southsiders by copping the opener, 6 to 3.

Chicago needed a double victory to move over the champs into third place and for a while it looked as though the Sox would make it. Both games were ding-dong battles all the way.

The Yanks were held to six hits in the first game by Lefty Thornton Lee, but mixed five of them with two errors for all their runs in the fourth and fifth frames. This made it necessary for the Sox to stage a four-run rally of their own in the sixth to win.

In the nightcap the Yankees opened up with four runs in the first inning and Chicago came right back with five in its half. The Sox got three more on five hits in the fourth and the game appeared decided.

But in the seventh George Selkirk homered with two on and in the eighth Joe DiMaggio, out of action with a leg injury, led off with a pinch double, Mike Chartak delivered a pinch single for one run and Charley Keller doubled for another.

Then the game was called because of darkness after a double play helped snuff out the Sox in short order. Clint Brown, who relieved Ed Smith after DiMaggio's hit, was the losing pitcher, and Steve Sundra got credit for the victory.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, Sept. 18.—It was a few days after the latest secret meeting of the Cleveland club that Buck Newsom heard newsboys outside the Detroit park shouting, "Extra! Trotsky assassinated!"

POVICH

"I knew Vitt would get him," said Newsom, reaching for a nickel and signaling for a paper. "It was only a question of time."

This story, of course, is not true, but it is pretty well established that First Baseman Trosky is the ring-leader of the Indians' revolt against Manager Vitt. He has never taken the trouble to deny it, at least.

Bolsheviks is what the Cleveland players are being called around the league. It is baseball's favorite word for any sort of agitator, and the name Trosky is peculiarly suggestive. The Indians, in fact, operate on something of a communistic order.

The actions of Cy Slapnicka, the team's general manager, resemble nothing as much as the role of a political commissar such as Moscow assigns to its armies to keep check on the generals. Manager Vitt gives orders and, according to reports, Slapnicka countermands 'em as he sees fit. Owner Bradley's office is a sort of Kremlin to which Slapnicka and the players have ready access in their attempts to read Vitt out of the party.

There isn't much doubt that Vitt is not long for the Cleveland managerial job. Especially if the Indians win the pennant, will Vitt's position be untenable. Clark Griffith's rule forbidding pennant-winning teams to sell or trade players would preclude any house-cleaning and it would be the same Cleveland ball club in 1941. That club doesn't want Vitt as manager and it is very well-known by this time that Mr. Bradley is not crazy about him.

Vitt is completing his third year as manager at Cleveland, but resentment of him has been smoldering among Cleveland players for two seasons. It simply flared this year. More than a year ago, Julius Solters threatened to punch the Cleveland manager in the nose. Solters, of Hungarian descent, objected to what he said was Vitt's name-calling. He told Vitt off on the day he was traded to the White Sox.

The June revolt of the Indians when they trooped into Owner Bradley's office to demand he be fired should scarcely have come as a stunning surprise to the Cleveland owner, in midseason of 1939, one of the Indians' most valuable players sought Bradley out one day and bared his own feelings about Vitt. "I can't play ball for him, Mr. Bradley," said the player. "He puts me in and takes me out so often I'm dizzy. It's serious enough with me to make me come to you. I'd like to be traded."

To Bradley's credit it must be noted that he took the player at his word and arranged a deal for him. "I'm doing this," said Bradley, "not because I will trade any player who doesn't like my manager, but because I have always liked you and the way you have served my team. I am glad to do you this favor."

Mr. Bradley, in a recent interview with Joe Williams, sought to explain his position as owner of the Indians with respect to the player revolt. "I have been criticized for entertaining the protests of my players against Manager Vitt," said Bradley, "and my critics say that I should have ignored them. I don't concede that I was wrong.

"Ever since I have been in business, and I have been a businessman for many, many years, I have always made it rule in my establishments that any of my employes could come to me with any complaints, real or fancied. That also has been the case with my ball players."

It is a rule that is admirable, no doubt, but it can scarcely apply to the baseball business which is a different kind of business than Bradley's mercantile and industrial interests. Baseball demands a different sort of discipline, akin to Army discipline. The bosses must be absolute bosses. Workers in the ranks can't squawk to the general or the whole setup will collapse.

Circumstances being what they are at Cleveland, Mr. Bradley must now choose between his manager and his ball players. He can scarcely retain both, with relations strained to the point where they no longer collaborate. And with good ball teams harder to assemble than managers are to hire, the gate is a sure shot to swing outward for Vitt.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 18.—Sportin' around:

One of those five leading National League hitters (?) may make a hit sometime this week and clinch that title . . . One of the reasons the big league managers are wholly opposed to the pennant claims of the Cleveland Indians is that if the team wins it would appear that managers aren't very important after all. They are, of course, and for No. 1 manager we'd like to nominate (at the suggestion of Arch McDonald) Joseph McCarthy. He has kept the Yanks up there, or thereabouts, though the team is last in the league in batting, hasn't got a pitcher who has won 15 games, and has only one .300 hitter—DiMag . . . Sonja Henie dropped 50 clams on the Dodgers Sunday, but probably won't have to go back to work because of it . . . Dan Morgan, who picked the Indians over Custer, likes Comiskey against Baer.

CONSIDINE

A District of Columbia club, called the Early Birds, traveled in a body to Philadelphia to honor a Maryland boy, Bill Werber, who plays for the Cincinnati (Ohio) Reds, the other day. Bill came through for his rooters, belting out a ninth inning triple that led to the Reds' thirty-seventh one-run victory of the year . . . You who contributed to the Georgia Coleman fund last winter gave her an extra year of life.

Night trotting at Gulfstream Park, Hollywood, Fla., will give winter visitors to the Miami area another chance to blow their dough this coming season . . . Surprising part of that 1,862 crowd at the Polo Grounds on Monday was that 1,262 people had the fortitude to watch the most colorless team in recent baseball history . . . We shudder to think how deep the harpoon would now rest in Will Terry if he managed, say, Cleveland.

Al Jolson's comeback in "Hold On to Your Hats" is akin to seeing Babe Ruth come out of retirement and start smacking home runs again . . . And speaking of comebacks, Burning Star, the veteran nag who was retired last year after running for four years and winning consistently, will be hauled out of the pasture for the $50,000 New York Handicap at Belmont . . . Jack Sutherland's Dodgers showed enough in their second half against the Redskins to make us think they'll beat the Skins in Ebbets Field, take a couple from the Giants, and win the Eastern division title . . . George Barrows, secretary of the chamber of commerce of Rome (N. Y.), would like a big league club to take over the Rome franchise as a farm. The little team, which plays in the Canadian-American League, drew 70,000 paid admissions last season. Maybe the Phillies will want to become Rome's farm.

Arthur Donovan went to see "Boom Town" the other night and called the fierce Gable-Tracy fight a draw . . . Since the California State Athletic Commission barred Belle Martell, the lady fight promoter, fight nites out there have grossed such figures as $1,400, $1,010, $893 and $500. Before she began promoting, six or seven years ago, Henry Armstrong drew $680 in a fight against Gene Espinosa. Her fights grossed as high as $16,000.

Eli Whitney, of the American Bowling Congress, tells me that there were 6,073 five-man teams, 10,398 two-man teams and 20,874 singles competitors in the last tournament—biggest sporting event in the country—that two players have competed in the last 40 annual tournaments; that Hank Marino has averaged 198 for the last 27 annual tournaments; that there are 18,000,000 male and 3,000,000 female bowlers in the country (Eli's solemn count) and that the game's main equipment house sold $35,000,000 worth of new installations this summer . . . That'll hold you.

They say that the Aknusti polo team derives its name from an old Indian slang word meaning "it costs too much" . . . Only kind word we've heard about the Cleveland ball players lately comes from your friend Elsie Shawen, Washington cab driver, who specializes in hauling the artists from Griffith Stadium to their hotels. "Next to the Yankees the Indians are the best tippers in baseball," she told us the other night while keeping up with a police escort mirage. "You fellows oughta lay off Trosky and those other boys. They're perfect gentlemen. I've read 50 times about what a sore-head Johnny Allen is, but I've carried him after he lost some heart-breakers and he's just as decent as ever" . . . It would be typical of the cockeyed American League pennant race for the Yanks to sport again—now that Joe DiMaggio is in dry dock.

Roger Peacock came out of semi-retirement from local competitive golf to win medal honors in the District Amateur Championship yesterday at Manor Country Club with a three-over par 73. A three-time winner of this tournament, the Indian Spring club titlist also won medal honors for the third time.

A carelessly tapped four-foot putt on the eighteenth green cost Maryland State Amateur Champion M. Parker Nolan a tie for low scoring honors as the Congressional shotmaker took five on the dog-leg finishing number and finished with a second best 74.

The 70-odd simon-pures of the local links just couldn't solve the course yesterday and out of one of the best fields in years none could break 73 and all scores of 77 or better made the championship flight. Duke Collegian Bobby Brownell and Fireman Burnett were the only prominent local amateurs missing.

Earl Skinker Posts 78

However several of the potential qualifiers played but found their efforts too high for the championship flight, including the young medal play star, Earle Skinker, who came to the eighteenth needing par for a 77, but he pushed his second shot and half-topped his third to finish with a 78. Billy Shea couldn't get going and posted an 82. Harry Pitt took seven on the par 4 sixteenth and finished with 78. Martin McCarthy is in the third sixteen with 85, while Louis Fuchs was reported to have taken 48 shots on the out nine.

The 75-spot was filled with a quartet of would-be medalists. Defending champion Ralph Bogart took six shots on the eighteenth hole for his 75, while C. Henry Cohen, of Capital, played eight holes in three under par, including a near-ace on the eighth, but he took seven on the ninth and 41 coming back. Georgetown Sophomore Jack Donohue, of Sioux City, Iowa, three-putted five greens but still came in with 75, while host club champ Dick Meyer was in easily with 38-37—75.

Buddy Sharkey Putted Poorly

George Miller was the star of the 76 shooters. He played all the way up the woods on the ninth for a big eight, and was out in 40, but he came back nicely in 36. Buddy Sharkey putted poorly, but posted a 76, while Cy Anderson, comedalist in the Manor Club championship, and tee-shot artist Bob Albertus had the same score.

A half-dozen 77 shooters stuck around until playoff time ready for a quick death battle down the first hole, but as it happened the 772 were good. George DeWitt helped out by playing eight holes in one under par, but he came back in 4 for a 7. The 77s were scored by Tommy Bones, Jim Gipe, Joe Balestri, W. B. McCreery, Billy Rochelle and Dr. Howard L. Smith.

Peacock played careful golf all the way around. His only long putt was a 25-footer for a birdie deuce on the eighth, while two shorter than his putter shaft glanced off the cup on the fifth and twelfth holes. Nolan dropped three birdie putts, but nullified them by too many bogeys. Peacock meets Anderson in the first round feature today, while Bogart's first test toward a second straight triumph will be Joe Balestri. Two siege gun boys mix, Nolan and Albertus. The quarter-finals will be played this afternoon.

Cards Crush Dodgers, 14-7, With 17 Hits

Flock Mathematically Eliminated From N. L. Pennant Race

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 18.—The St. Louis Cardinals crushed the Dodgers 14 to 7 under a 17-hit bombardment today and mathematically eliminated Brooklyn from the National League pennant when Cincinnati conquered the Phillies.

Johnny Mize contributed four singles and batted in six runs as the Redbirds mauled four Dodger pitchers.

Lon Warneke started for the Cardinals, but lasted only three innings during which he gave up five runs. Babe Phelps jolted him with a homer wit hthe bases loaded in the first inning. Carl Doyle took charge in the fourth and got credit for the victory, although he too pitched a home run ball—to Dolph Camilli with one on in the eighth.

Cincinnati Takes Second Straight Flag As Vander Meer Is Victor in 13-Inning Battle, Although Relieved in Last Frame

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—Cincinnati won its second straight National League championship today by coming from behind to beat the Phillies, 4 to 3, in a 13-inning battle.

The Reds with 13 games left to play, now hold a 12-game lead over the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers, who lost to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Cincinnati has won 93 games and lost 47. Brooklyn, with 10 games to play, has won 83 and lost 61.

Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer, recently recalled from the American Association, pitched and batted the Reds to victory although he did not hurl the final inning.

First up in the thirteenth, Vander Meer slammed one of Hugh Mulcahy's offerings to left for a two-bagger. He went to third on Eddie Joost's sacrifice, held third while Mike McCormick beat out a hit to short, then scored on Ival Goodman's fly to deep left.

Joe Beggs replaced Vander Meer for the Phils' thirteenth and retired the tailenders in one, two, three order.

"I'm glad it's all over," declared Manager Bill McKechnie in the clubhouse after the game as his men slapped each other on the back and shouted in delight.

"We now can go ahead and prepare for the World Series, something we were unable to do last year. We'll take it easy for a day or two and then start getting ready."

It took until September 28, three days before the end of the season, for the Reds to clinch their their 1939 flag by 3½ games over the Cardinals. This year they went into the lead on July 7 and were never ousted.

With Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer and Junior Thompson chalking up 54 victories between them the Reds were never worse than third this year. They haven't lost more than three games in a row and including today's, have won 38 games by one run.

Their worst record was in August when they split even, winning 16 and losing 16. So far this month they have won 16 and lost two.

The Phils took a two-run lead on the Reds in the second inning today, Ham Schulte's fly and Mulcahy's single driving in the runs. The Reds got one in the fifth on Art Mahan's error and tied the score in the seventh on Linus Frey's single.

The Reds went ahead in the tenth on Mike McCormick's one-base blow, but Joe Marty's third two-bagger of the game tied the score at 3-3 in the Phils' half.

The Angel Returns To Turner's Arena For Match Tonight

LA ANGEL

The Angel, a Frenchman, has not appeared here since last winter, when he defeated Alan Eustace, the Wakefield (Kan.) farmer, at the Arena before a capacity crowd. More than 1,000 fans were turned away.

Despite the fact that he has been in this country about one year enjoying the greatest build-up of any wrestler since Jim Londos first streaked across the horizon, there has been no let-down in The Angel's drawing power.

District civilian team did not fare so well in the V. F. W. Trophy match, finishing fourth from last in a 49 team field, with a score of 1,261. The American Legion Blue won with 1,372.

Cutback Play Stresses Surprise

Designed to capitalize on its surprise element, this cutback inside tackle worked to perfection last Sunday to allow Frank Filchock to score against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Meanwhile, the ball carrier, Jim Meade in the pictures, has started out wide and made a sharp cut back into the line through the hole opened up. It's at this point that a flaw arises in this particular performance.

Jim Barber, the offensive right tackle, who can be seen in the middle of the line, was supposed to move straight out and block the other defensive line backer-up. The pictures show Barber boxed in, however, as Malone puts a cross-block on Clem Stralka, the defensive guard trying to break through. As a result, Barber became tangled up in the line in the slow-running signal drill, and Clyde Shugart was left free to come across the line and nail Meade. Shugart can be identified on Flaherty's diagram as "C."

On the far side of the line in the picture, you'll note that Left End Wayne Millner has "bumped" the defensive end and is going downfield to take out the right halfback. The offensive left-guard, Dick Farman, No. 21, also has detained the defensive right tackle just long enough and is moving downfield to take out the quarterback, or safety man.

Roncat Is Beaten by A Neck; Port Wales Runs Third; 7,500 View Race Card

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 18.—The Tower Stable's Guerrilla took command early and stayed on top until pay-off time in the Jarrettsville Purse, the best offering on the Wednesday program. Jockey Bob Howell, who was suspended yesterday but under the rules allowed to ride his engagements today, had the mount on the son of Crack Brigade and Whisper Low, to get the 3-year-old colt home a neck in front of W. W. Vaughan's Roncat. Port Wales, racing for Mrs. Dion K. Kerr, of Washington, D. C., was third and a length behind the place position.

Guerrilla was well played by the crowd of 7,500 and Howell gave the colt an excellent ride. He kept the Tower Stable ace going through the stretch to stave off the determined bid of Roncat.

The customers liked the record of Guerrilla and he paid $6.10. His time for the 6 furlongs was 1:12 3-5 over a fast track.

Jockey Joe Wagner was the riding hero of the day. He rode both ends of the $60.40 daily double. In the first race he climbed in the saddle of Flying Easy, owned by J. C. Ellis, and the filly fairly flew out over the 6-furlong course, turning back Kennet, Bardy and nine others to pay $10.80 in her own right.

In the second event, Wagner went postward on Sun Triad, the property of William F. Hitt and that owner's first of two winners on the program.

Wagner piloted winner No. 3 in the fifth race. Entrusted with Microphobia, the $5 favorite, the jockey made the colt circle the leaders and then drew him out to a length advantage approaching the wire.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

Although the pay-offs will be in very good United States currency, today's program sets a new low for cards at a Maryland mile track. There isn't a race that does not offer some horses that competed on the half-milers. Perhaps the answer is that the smaller tracks had better horses than usual. I understand some of the big Maryland tracks would like to get rid of daily double. They contend that a small portion of the crowd cashes, while many others go broke trying to beat it. If it were not for the double, these customers would keep the money rolling into and out of the machines. Then again, too many persons who hit a big pay-off stick the money in their pockets and become spectators for the remainder of the season. On the other hand, when there is a very short double mutuel, it stimulates betting. J. V. Tigani, whose Kennet was second in the first race, claimed F. J. Heller's Hotzea out of the race. If you have wondered what became of Jockey G. Gardoza he had a broken finger that refused to heal. The promising colored boy is O. K. now and has been working for two weeks. He hopes to ride in races before the meeting ends. I want to thank Henry Rodier. He reprinted my column on Jockeys Workman and Smith in his bulletin. Or should I charge him? Looks like Christmas Day today. The Christmas Brothers have horses in almost every race. C. S. Howard's Mioland arrived yesterday. He is a sure starter in Saturday's $10,000 Potomac Handicap. Jockey Moose Peters says he will stay in Maryland for the remainder of the season. Jockey Mannie Berg went to New York last night to ride a horse today. Charlie Bussey is picking them in masterful fashion for Jack's Green Card. He seems to improve with the years. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Rough Man down from Narragansett where he finished second beaten a head by Boiled Shirt is well placed in this maiden event and figures to score. Running Light closed well after a slow start opening day and may be dangerous. Buckle Up has speed.

Second race—Flaming High just missed when nosed out by Surprise Box last out. Meeting the same field here, minus the winner, he should stick it out. Shailleen was in behind the top horse in that heat but showed good effort. Kleig Light will be dangerous if he goes.

Third race—Rough News, third in his recent Narragansett race, finished only a length off the winner and his time was good. He rates a slight edge in this six furlong dash. Spang indicates promise from late efforts in New York and will be the one to beat. Long Lane appears best of the others.

Fourth race—Hide has been idle since Saratoga where he was runnerup four lengths behind Blare in creditable time. Room Service should better her poor performance at Timonium. Miss Ponne, winner of her last race last spring, may need this race.

Fifth race—Flag Post scored at the expense of a similar field in the mud at Narragansett and looks good to repeat. Walkon went well in his last and appears capable of handling the others. Braving Danger was well liked in his recent race but showed little.

Sixth race—Minston was fifth only two lengths off Pont Neuf on Tuesday. The contention here hails from the half-milers and he should win. Squabble showed good speed when racing with Warlaine on Monday and should hold the others safe. Red Label should not be overlooked.

Seventh race—Black Frouse has been holding his own against platers of this sort in New England; his last race indicates top form. Braxton, third on Monday, may have needed that race. Boat's Crew is a money possibility.

Best Bet—Rough News.

Upsets Unlikely as Major Grid Teams Open Schedules

Williamson Names Setups For Saturday

Closest Game Looms As Hardin-Simmons Centenary College Clash; Others Named

(This is the second in a series of articles on college football ratings which will appear Tuesdays and Thursdays in The Post exclusively in Washington.)

By Paul B. Williamson,
Famous Football Statistician

With most of this week-end's games serving as warm-ups for top-flight teams, there are few upset possibilities. Closest pick for the Williamson System is Centenary College over tough little Hardin-Simmons.

The Centenary Gentlemen, playing on their home lot in Shreveport, La., lost to the Cowboys, 7-6, last season.

Other major selections are Gonzaga over Idaho, Oklahoma Aggies—Williamson's choice for the Missouri Valley Conference championship — over Central State (Okla.) Teachers, Boston College handily over Luther at Ames, and Kentucky over Baldwin-Wallace.

The Yellow Jackets of Baldwin-Wallace may pack lots of sting as the outstanding dark horse team of the Ohio Conference, but the Colonels will hold the edge as the outstanding "sneaker" for the superior Southeastern Conference.

Setups should be Clemson over Presbyterian; Mississippi over Union University; North Carolina over Appalachian Teachers; V. M. I. over Roanoke; V. P. I. over Catawba; Washington and Lee easily over Hampden-Sydney; William and Mary to topple North Carolina State. William and Mary has been looked upon in the past as a breather for Virginia State teams, but the dope swings to the Indians this season. The system batted 100 per cent on all seven week-end selections.

Record Field Enters Regatta Meet

Top—They're on the bench now, but this Ambassador Hotel swimming quintet will be right out in the water Saturday at the Shoreham Hotel when they will face the Shoreham team in a meet as part of the President's Cup Regatta program. Left to right, at the Ambassador Pool, are Rita Essex, Jackie White, Mickey Mattare, Tommy Mathes and Carol Essex. Bottom—Margaret Brewer, 15, does a back swan off the low board in the last practice yesterday before Saturday's meet

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Sid Hudson and Buddy Lewis were the standout performers for the Nats at Cleveland yesterday and merit the chief awards in the Man of the Month contest.

To Hudson, ten points, because he pitched clever ball despite his 2-1 defeat by Feller, and made one of the Nats' five hits in the second game.

To Lewis, ten points, because he made a hit in both games, and because in the second game he twice cut down base runners with magnificent throws to second base and home plate.

To Jimmy Pofahl, five points, because in the second game he made one of the Nats' hits, scored their only run and made a spectacular stop and throw to cut off a run at home plate. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	46	Jimmy Pofahl	21
Dutch Leonard	37	Joe Krakauskas	18
Jimmy Bloodworth	33	Cecil Travis	16
Sid Hudson	32	Rick Ferrell	12
Gee Walker	30	Jake Early	11
George Case	29	Rene Monteagudo	11
Jack Sanford	29	Walter Masterson	5

Colonials' Sophs Bid for Regular Jobs on Eleven

Sophomore Guard Harry Agusiewicz and Soph Tackle Dan Snyder bid for first-string berths in a blocking and tackling drill by the George Washington University football squad yesterday on the polo field.

The squad will scrimmage today on the polo field.

Feller Hurls Indians Back Into A. L. Lead

Nats Drop Pair, 3-1, 2-1; Hudson Beaten In Second Game

Lewis held a seventh inning uprising against Hudson to one run with another brilliant throw. Mack got a double on a ball that Gee Walker dropped in deep left, and with two out, Feller singled to right to score Mack. Chapman drew a walk, and Weatherly singled to right but a throw from Lewis cut down Feller at the plate.

The Nats had the two tying runs on base in the eighth with none out, but could score only once. Pofahl led off with a single and Ferrell walked. Hudson popped out after vainly trying to sacrifice but Feller filled the bases with a walk to Case. Lewis' fly to Chapman scored Pofahl from third, but Walker grounded out.

Chase Is Wild

That first game was won and lost in the second inning when Chase's control deserted him and the Indians came up with three runs. Bell opened the inning with a single to right, and with one out, Mack walked. Pytlak got a single on a grounder that Travis messed up and the bases were filled. Chase walked Allen, forcing over a run, and then he walked Chapman forcing over another. Weatherly hit a double-play grounder toward Pofahl and the ball hit Allen on the leg for an automatic out, but Chase walked Boudreau to force home the third run of the inning.

The Nats got their only run off Allen after Case opened with a safe bunt and Lewis followed with a single to right. Case scored from third as Travis hit into a double play. The Nats didn't get another man as far as second base.

New York A. C. Quartet To Swim at Shoreham Saturday; 115 Entered

The New York Athletic Club, with a speedy foursome composed of Frank Moorman, Max Bonisser, Frank Donohue and Harmon Smith, has entered the swimming meet of the President's Cup Regatta scheduled Saturday night in the Venetian Pool of the Shoreham Hotel, A. Earle Weeks, aquatic chairman of the Regatta, stated last night.

This will be the first time the New Yorkers have entered the President's Cup meet, and bid fair to prove serious threats for the important events.

At the same time Weeks announced that a record-breaking field of 115 had entered the Regatta meet. This is 10 more than last season.

Seventeen clubs have entered. They are, besides New York A. C., St. George's Dragon Club, Brooklyn; North Branch "Y," Philadelphia; Goldsboro Swimming A. C., High Point, N. C.; Central Pennsylvania Swimming Association, Lancaster; Y. M. H. A., Baltimore; Lakewood, Baltimore; Women's Swimming Association, New York; Flatbush Boys Club, Brooklyn; Cumberland Aquatic Club; K. of C., Baltimore, and Penn A. C., Shoreham, Ambassador, Washington Golf and Country Club, Southeastern Boys Club and Y. M. C. A., of Washington.

Lorraine Fischer, of New York, member of the national champions medley relay team which won recently in Portland, is entered in three events—the free style, breast and medley. Miss Fischer has two legs on the President's Cup in the medley event, and needs a win Saturday night to retire it.

In the battle for the President's Cup for men swimmers the Knights of Columbus, Baltimore, with two legs on it, will seek to retire it permanently, since Penn A. C., also with two legs, has not entered a team in the 300-yard medley relay event.

Tobin Hurls Victory Over Pirates, 4 to 1

Pitcher Only Allows Ex-Mates Five Hits; Ross Hits Circuit

Boston, Sept. 18 (AP).—Jim Tobin pitched his first game against the Pittsburgh Pirates, his former mates, today and allowed only five hits today as the Boston Bees won 4-1.

The Bees rapped out nine safeties off Joe Bowman, one of them, Chet Ross' seventeenth home run, in the fourth with Max West on base. Ross also drove out two singles to led the Bees' attack.

Hoya Soph Injured, Lost For 3 Weeks

The first major injury of the season was reported at Georgetown University yesterday as the Hoya varsity opened a series of scrimmages with Elmer ("Hap") Hardell's husky freshmen.

Prior to the afternoon workout it was learned that Walter (Red) O'Connell, 195-pound sophomore quarterback, had suffered a shoulder separation in last Wednesday's workout that will keep him inactive for three weeks.

O'Connell's injury was not considered serious at first, but a thorough examination yesterday disclosed the separation. O'Connell was progressing impressively prior to his setback.

It was "bloody Wednesday" yesterday as the freshmen faced their upper classmen for the first time, and no punches were pulled as the teams banged away through a full length scrimmage.

The forward-passing combinations of Dornfeld and Julius Koshlap to Doolan scored repeatedly while John Lascari, veteran end, also pulled in a touchdown pass on one occasion.

Montreal Boxing Body Holds Purse Of Natie Brown

By the Associated Press

Montreal, Sept. 18.—The Montreal Athletic Commission decided today to confiscate the purses of fighters Natie Brown, of Washington, Mickey McAvoy, of New York, and George Leslie, of Canada. All three appeared on a boxing card here three weeks ago.

Immediately after the fight, the commission announced the purses were being withheld. Brown was knocked out by Yvon Robert, of Montreal, in the second round of the feature bout, while the other two fighters lost preliminary bouts.

Dundee to Take Over Furr Training Today

New York Manager of Washington Fighter Arrives to Start Personal Supervision Of Work for Welterweight Title Bout

Chris Dundee, dapper manager of Phil Furr, will come to Washington from New York today to supervise the remainder of Furr's training program for the Monday night battle with Henry Armstrong for the world's welterweight championship.

The well-liked New Yorker will bring along with him two sparring partners for Phil to work with today at 1 p. m. at Meadowbrook Farms.

With a chance—about one in a million—of steering Furr to a championship just as he did in the case of Ken Overlin in the middleweight division, Dundee has had Philbert on a strict training schedule for the past four weeks but left matters largely in the hands of Bob Hayden.

Furr went through his first long workout yesterday at the Huron gymnasium, where he boxed 10 rounds—six of which were with Marcus Pitte, erstwhile estranged sparmate who returned to Furr's camp begging forgiveness for howling for his last week's salary. Pitte claimed he had not been paid and that he was quitting Furr's camp, but Furr's handlers pointed out that he was to be paid for the duration of the training period.

Phil looked in top form, and he apparently is convinced that he has a strong chance of winning Armstrong's title Monday night in the ball park.

Navigation Wins

Bureau of Navigation won the Navy Interbureau Softball League title yesterday at West Potomac, defeating Naval Communication, 5-2.

Al Newman, Traffic, rolled high game of 141. Accounting and Northern No. 2 are tied for league leadership with six wins against no losses.

WESTERN ELECTRIC

In the Western Electric League at Brookland Recreation alleys last night Hogarth, of the Coin Collectors, rolled a high set of 372 to lead his team to victory.

WAR DEPARTMENT LEAGUE

The War Department Ordnance Duckpin Mixed League got under way last night at Columbia alleys with James Walker, Antiaircraft, taking individual high game and set honors with 116-325. The Ballistics quintet captured high team game and set with 483-1,422.

Helen Bertoty, Range Finders, captured high game for the ladies with 107, while high set was rolled by Mildred Blue, Ballistics, who chalked up 276.

TAKOMA LEAGUE

The Takoma Duckpin Association, bowled at Takoma Recreation. R. Russell, Youngblood Hardware, took high individual game with 156, while high set honors went to J. Jeffries, Wonder Bread, with 395. High team game was rolled by Hyde Builders, with 639, while Takoma Ambulance had high team set with 1,761.

AUTOMOTIVE

The Automotive Duckpin League had its inaugural last night at the Ice Palace alleys with Joe Marceron, Capital Cadillac, taking high individual game honors with 152 to pace his five in a 2 to 1 win over Emerson & Orme No. 1. High set was rolled by Jack Sencindiver, E. J. Payne, with a 392 that helped his team capture 2 out of 3 from H. B. Leary. The E. J. Payne team rolled high team game with 597, while Paul Brothers took high set with 1,671.

Conventon Hall Wins

Convention Hall scored the only clean sweep of the District Bowling League matches last night, winning all three from the defending champion Rosslyn outfit in the second week of action. Ed Blakeney's 414 was high for the winners.

Siggie Solem's 166 game and 425 set was the night's best individual effort but his Penn Recreation team lost the odd one to Brookland. Bub Guethler's 397 led Lucky Strike to 2 out of 3 over Arcadia while Hyattsville upset Chevy Chase, 2 to 1, led by Irving Billheimer's 409.

Monk Walker's 407 was high of the match but his Georgetown teammates dropped two to King Pin while Clarendon, paced by Gene Hargett's 406, won 2 out of 3 over Lafayette.

Horse Show Sets 18 Classes

Local horse show folk, considerably brightened by the cash prizes and silver trophies to be given to winners at the Chevy Chase Horse Show, will turn out full force for the semiannual event on Sunday opposite the Meadowbrook Saddle Club, on East-West highway.

Eighteen classes make up the program, including junior, pony, hunter and open jumper divisions. The committee is again featuring its "follow-the-leader" class, for open horses, in which lots are drawn for the No. 1 position. The first horse may take the course in any way his rider desires, until he scores a knockdown; then succeeding horses are allowed to continue any way they choose. Practically anything happens during such activities.

Donald Bradley heads the committee, which also includes Jean Bradley and Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman. Post entries in classes are $1.

Self-Survey Launched by U. S. Industry

N. A. M. to Determine Defense Potentialities Of Smallest Plants

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 18.—A survey of the Nation's industrial assets for possible use in the defense program was announced tonight by H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Thousands of plants, not now engaged in manufacturing supplies for the military forces, may find their tools, machines and floor space vital cogs in the defense program, he said.

He disclosed plans for the factory inventory in a speech prepared for delivery before a New York regional meeting of manufacturers.

Supplements U. S. Study

Describing it as the most comprehensive survey of its kind yet attempted, Prentis explained it would supplement the production inventory made for the Army and Navy.

"Under M-day plans," he explained "all large plants came under the scrutiny of the Procurement Division. This new inventory will reach down into thousands of small plants, in an effort to reveal their potentialities for defense production.

"This is an inventory by and of industry itself."

Mails, he added, are carrying the first announcements to manufacturers affiliated with the National Industrial Council, sponsored by the Manufacturers Association.

Plans Are Outlined

Telling how industry is answering the "call to the colors," he said plans also involve:

(a) A study of war financing, price and labor control, in light of European experience, to be submitted to the Government.

(2) A program of industrial research for defense needs.

(3) A project for improving health conditions, particularly in small plants.

"Industry is making every possible effort to aid the work of the National Defense Commission in order that the road may be smoothed and obstacles removed before they are actually encountered," he said.

"The management of industry does not need to be 'conscripted.' It has already volunteered, and the introduction of more business into Government, rather than more Government into business, is what is really pushing ahead our program of national defense."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—Wheat prices reached the best level in about two weeks on an advance of ⅛@1¼ cents today largely as a result of revival of mill buying.

Closing at or near the highest quotations of the session, September contracts finished at 76⅞@77 and December at 77⅞@77¾. The upturn in wheat also strengthened corn and other grains. Corn closed ⅝ lower to ⅝ higher compared with yesterday's finish, September, 61⅝; December, 55⅝@55¾; oats, ⅛@⅜ up; soybeans, ⅛@1¼ higher; rye, ⅝@¾ up, and lard unchanged to 13 higher.

Some wheat buying was attributed to dealers who were encouraged by the progress of the war and by firmness of securities. The mill buying was believed to have represented lifting of hedges as a result of flour business or accumulation of contracts against future requirements. December contracts were priced about 2 cents cheaper than the quoted figure on No. 2 hard here.

Winnipeg prices tumbled 3@3¾ cents, but this represented adjustment of quotations to the new minimum levels. However, some trades were made, partly representing milling and export buying. Trade has been virtually at a standstill in the Winnipeg futures market since late in June, with the market at the minimum levels.

September corn fell a cent at one stage to 71⅝, lowest in three weeks, but new crop contracts firmed with wheat.

No. 3 yellow soybeans sold at 81 cents here, ¼ cents over October contracts.

Tidewater Oil Figures in Talk Of Giant Merger

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 18 (AP).—A merger that would put Tidewater Associated Oil Co. into the "big ten" of the industry was reported being discussed today.

Reliable sources declared Skelly Oil Co. and other oil and gas interests controlled by J. Paul Getty might be consilidated with Tidewater if preliminary discussions find a basis for official negotiations.

Getty was the controlling interest in Mission Corporation, a holding company, and Pacific Western Oil Corporation, a producing company operating in California. Mission controls Skelly and also owns 17 per cent of Tidewater's common.

While Skelly and Tidewater officials here answered queries with "no comment," Getty is known to favor a consolidation. Even now, Pacific Western and Tidewater operate their California properties as one concern.

Dual Banking System Upheld

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—Supervisors of State banks, representing 41 States in their thirty-ninth annual session here today, were urged to oppose any move to establish a single system of banking under Government control.

D. W. Bates, superintendent of banks, Des Moines, Iowa, and president of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks, told delegates to the convention that "the dual banking system is particularly well adapted to this country. It has a certain flexibility that enables it to serve the needs of all sections and all groups."

"A single system of banking," Mr. Bates stated, "under the complete control of the Federal Government would not be as well suited to meet the diverse needs of our citizens."

SEC Answers Criticism of 'Shackling'

Chairman Frank Denies 'Unreasonable' Act Cited by Judge

By the Associated Press

Chairman Jerome Frank of the Securities Commission said last night that the SEC had not placed "shackles on the business judgment" of the trustees of Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, as charged by Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell in New York.

Frank made public a letter to the trustees, Denis J. Driscoll and Willard L. Thorp, in which he said the commissioners were surprised by reports that Judge Leibell "had apparently gained the impression" during the trustees' appearance at a hearing that the SEC had restricted dividend payments by a subsidiary to the corporation."

Thorp told the court that the trustees had decided against having Northeastern Water & Electric Corporation, an A. G. & E. subsidiary, acquire for $1,250,000 the outstanding stock of Union Water Service Co. because the SEC had stipulated that Northeastern could not pay dividends to its parent until a three-year note to finance the purchase had been paid.

Leibell commented that such a condition was "unreasonable" and that he would not approve commission conditions in the future unless they were "reasonable and necessary."

Frank said in his letter that no such order had been issued or even considered by the commission.

The facts were, he said, that members of the SEC staff told counsel for the trustees informally that they believed that such a restriction ought to be imposed, and that they intended to recommend it. At the same time, he added, the SEC staff raised another question.

This latter was discussed during oral argument before the commission Monday, but the matter of dividends was not raised, Frank said. He continued:

"The important thing is that, up to the present time, the commission has not had before it the question of the legality or advisability of such a restriction on dividends. The matter is still open, so far as this commission is concerned."

C. & O. Railway Net Spurts in August

Cleveland, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway today reported August net income of $3,640,799, an increase of $441,353 over August, 1939. For the first eight months of 1940 net income was $22,259,560, an increase of $10,731,482 over the same period last year.

Railway operating revenues for August were $12,373,710, an increase of $940,490 over August, 1939. Net railway operating income during the month was $4,319,783, an increase of $238,456 over the corresponding month last year.

Cotton Futures

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Expanded demand for textiles created brisk buying in cotton futures today. Hedging sales, however, kept check and the market closed 3 points higher to 2 lower.

Revival of activity in cloth markets was reflected in a pick-up in buying from trade and mill accounts. Spot houses also supported quotations.

Southern hedge selling, especially on later deliveries, also increased and, although offerings were readily taken, considerable resistance developed when the list swung ahead.

An estimated 12,000,000 yards or more of print cloths and related items changed hands in Worth street. Mills asked advances of ⅝ cent a yard on several of the more popular constructions and in many cases the higher prices were paid. In isolated instances business was written for delivery next year.

Private Enterprise Best Meets Defense Needs, Declares Olds

Pittsburgh, Sept. 18 (AP).—Irving Olds, chairman of the U. S. Steel Corporation, said today national defense needs will be produced quicker and at lower cost "if private enterprise is at the helm under its own leadership."

In an address prepared for delivery at a luncheon opening a three-day inspection tour of U. S. Steel plants by corporation officials, Olds declared:

"We have read recently of a 'sit-down strike' of capital and of industry's 'refusal' to cooperate with the government. There is no basis for any of these stories. Unfortunately, we have about us critics who appear only too willing, by reason of ignorance or otherwise, to point a condemning finger toward business without attempting to ascertain the underlying facts."

He asserted the strategic steel industry "will not be found lacking in cooperation or in zeal or patriotism," and that "generally speaking the personnel of American business is both experienced and competent and as patriotic as any other group of American citizens."

He cautioned, however, that it took time to convert orders into finished products and added:

". . . It will not be surprising if many insufficiencies in military equipment and supplies still exist a year hence. But American industry must not be held responsible for delays in the commencement of the program, or for the time necessarily required to carry out the program. Business is just as desirous as anyone else of speeding output, of completing contracts and of clearing the decks for still further production in the public interest."

Although the steel industry is operating about 92 per cent of theoretical capacity, Olds said national defense contracts accounted for "only a small percentage" of production.

"I do not mean," he said, "to convey the impression that when steel in greater quantities is required at some later date for the national defense program the steel industry will be found unequal to the task imposed upon it. On the contrary, I believe the elasticity within the steel industry will permit an ample supply of steel when needed, . . . although some system of priorities may be found necessary."

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the Steel Corporation, said he understood Government plans may call for an expenditure of "as high as $40,000,000" at the South Charleston, W. Va., armor plate plant.

The plant, built during the World War at an estimated cost of $20,000,000, is operated under lease by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, major subsidiary of big steel.

List Advances for Fourth Consecutive Day; Interest Grows in Lower-Priced Shares

New York, Sept. 18.—The stock market overcame early hesitancy today and staged its fourth consecutive advance in a trading volume that was the largest in more than a week. Difficulties encountered by the Germans in launching their expected invasion of England, growing antipathy to the third term and a wealth of favorable business reports helped to keep the trend pointed upward.

The composite average added 0.28 point, with the sharpest gains coming in the steel, aviation and equipment groups. The big board's volume was 479,390 shares.

Brokers reported a growing interest in lower-priced shares and Packard was the day's most active stock, but the list of leaders contained many of the members of the higher-priced bracket. Steel was up about a point and Bethlehem added a good fraction. Clearing up of the dividend arrears on Republic Steel 6 per cent preferred brought activity into this issue and it held within a fraction of its high for the year while the prior preferred gained 2 points and made a new 1940 top.

This group was aided by the mid-week report of conditions in the industry, published by "Iron Age" and by the remarks of Irving S. Olds, chairman of the steel corporation, at Pittsburgh. Mr. Olds gave a well-deserved rebuke to those critics of business who have accused capital of a sit-down strike and pointed out the obvious fact that the best use of our facilities, in the fight for defense, will be obtained if experienced men in private industry, rather than inexperienced Government appointees, are at the helm. Cheering to investors was his observation that the industry is operating at approximately 92 per cent of capacity without the aid of more than a small portion of the American orders for war materials.

The rally of the general list has now recovered approximately 50 per cent of the loss of last week, a loss that was initiated at the beginning of the week by the intensification of the German bombing of Britain. Technicians see the important test coming when the list approaches the high of last week, and if it is able to break through this level on volume, the rise should be extended further.

Failure of the composite average to penetrate last week's high and a consequent violation of the recent low made late last week, would lead chartists to believe that the secondary trend had been reversed to downward. The long-term trend, according to the Dow theory, is still downward but the secondary trend is adjudged to be upward.

Among less active issues in today's trading, gains of around a point were made by Union Carbide, Telephone, First National Stores, Phillip Morris, National Oil Products, Douglas & Dow Chemical. Allied Chemical was up more than 2 points and Johns Manville 2½. Several inactive preferred issues were up sharply, notably Cluett Peabody preferred which jumped 8. Rustless Iron preferred gained 3¼.

Small gains were comon in the listed bond market with speculative railroad issues the favorites. The performance indicated that good rail earnings are turning investor money toward the better interest-payers of the speculative group. United States Treasury issues showed fractional improvement, and the tone also was favorable in the best grade corporate loans. Turnover in all bonds was $6,460,000.

Buying of rail bonds centered largely in issues that may be benefited directly by the recent improvement in carrier operations. Not only the speculative interest-payers, but also the reorganization rails were in demand. Gains sometimes exceeded a point and in a few instances ran to 2 and 3 points. Holding company and share privilege issues moved forward as did communications and amusement bonds. Local tractions were dull.

British Empire bonds were quiet in the foreign section. Australians showing small gains while Canadans displayed equally small recessions. German and Italian issues were soft, while bonds of the Nazi-occupied countries were irregular.

Workers' Incomes Seen This Year At 1924-29 Level

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted yesterday that industrial production for the year 1940 would show a gain of about 10 per cent over 1939.

Such an improvement, the bureau said in an analysis of the economic situation, would raise incomes of industrial workers to around the 1937 "post-depression" peak or about the average of 1924-1929 period.

Further gains in industrial activity this fall and winter were expected to be developed, the bureau said, by "the cumulative effect of the expanding defense program, the timing of production on the 1941 automobile models, Government buying and other factors pointing to a high rate of activity in the textile industries, the prospect for less than the usual seasonal contraction in residential building, and the recent strength in commodity prices."

U. S. Debt Passes 44 Billions Before Loans on Defense

By the Associated Press

The Federal debt soared past $44,000,000,000 yesterday before the Treasury had begun huge borrowings for national defense.

The Treasury revealed that out of its $45,000,000,000 limit on borrowing for general purposes, it had exhausted $44,061,821,728. Several additional millions of the borrowing power also were reserved to cover the automatically increasing value of baby bonds.

This indicated that most of the Treasury's borrowing in coming months would be confined to the special $4,000,000,000 borrowing authority given it by Congress for national defense purposes.

Since the present fiscal year started July 1, the Treasury has increased its debt by $1,094,290,690. Compared with a year ago, the debt was up about $3,300,000,000.

Bombs may be raining down on England in the worst air raids the world has ever known. But it looks as if the Germans will have to do even more than they are doing to seriously disturb the average Englishman—at least your English short wave fan.

Here's an excerpt from a letter WJSV received a couple of days ago, which should give you an idea:

"During the air raid alarm last night (August 23), I happened to switch on our radio and tune around the medium wave band. On approaching 205 meters, I heard an unmistakably American voice. When I tuned in, I discovered that the station was broadcasting a sports talk. As I am a short-wave DX fan, you can guess that I was pretty thrilled to think that I was listening to my first medium-wave American station. Finally at 03.00 GMT (Greenwich Mean Time), I heard the station announcement: 'Arch McDonald—WJSV—Washington—Time 10 p. m., EST.'

"The receiver in use is an 'Ultra' all-wave superhet, four valves and rectifier, with full A. V. C. The weather was cold—barometer falling—bright moonlight night—with searchlights all over the sky. I would very much appreciate some form of verification if this report is of use to the CBS."

It was signed "Raymond F. Fautley, (M. R. S. G. B.) 'Pamela', 27 Marlow Drive, North Cheam, Surrey, England."

EXCLUSIVE POINTS OF EXCELLENCE IN SOCIETY BRAND CLOTHES

HAND SHAPING MOLDS THE FABRIC

Frequent underpressing by skilled hands at each step in the tailoring, "molds" the style lines into the garment permanently . . . a feature not found in cheaper clothing.

SNUG-EASE SHOULDER

VAC-BLOC ARMHOLE

PIVOT-HUNG POCKETS

CROTCH-EASE CONSTRUCTION

Pure silk thread in all seams including the crotch gives enough elasticity for seams to spring back into shape in spite of stretching and twisting . . . permits the garment to shape itself to you as you wear it.

COIN POCKET IN TROUSER

WOULD YOU LOOK LIKE A MAN OF AFFAIRS?

Dignified . . . solid . . . well groomed . . . a highly respected citizen

"FASHIONAIRE" WORSTEDS . . . . . $50 and $55

WOULD YOU LOOK LIKE A BUSINESS SUCCESS? . . . . .
